'Million-to-One' Event

Triplets Born 13 Days Apart

FORT FRANCES, Ont. (CP)—Triplets are thriving in this northwest Ontario town after having been born 13 days apart, in a medical rarity.

A boy and a girl were born by caesarean section to Mrs. Clarence Bujold Friday—13 days after the first of the triplets, a boy, had been born at La Verendrye Hospital here.

Mrs. Bujold entered the hospital a month before the first baby arrived, and remained in hospital under close surveillance.

The first boy, born April 1, weighed four pounds, 14 ounces. The girl, born first on Friday, weighed six pounds, followed by her younger brother who weighed five pounds, 10 ounces.

Dr. W. G. Boyle, the attending physician and a practitioner in Fort Frances since 1937, said in an interview: "We had lots of time to prepare, as an X-ray was taken two months before the first baby arrived."

The physicians said the triplets were expected to arrive April 12, "and the first baby could be called premature, although this was not indicated by its weight."

All three babies were "remarkably husky."

Dr. Boyle did not comment on the lengthy delay between the births, beyond saying that the first baby "arrived naturally, then complications developed and the caesarean operation was later performed."

"It's a one-in-a-million chance," he said. He could not recall a similar case in Canada.

Chiefs Form Crime Link

VANCOUVER (CP)—A new, interprovincial police chiefs information system has been set up in Western Canada to keep abreast of organized crime.

The decision to exchange information about crime and criminals on an informal basis was taken during the weekend at the conclusion of the fifth annual conference of Western Canada police chiefs.

No Threat Yet

West Vancouver chief Meir MacBrayne said the new system will enable municipal police departments to keep in touch with crime in other centres.

He did not think Western Canada was as yet faced with any threat from syndicated crime, although there was a definite connection between the drug rackets in Vancouver and Ontario.

Chiefs Advised

He said the chiefs have been advised of the movement of rackets in the United States but so far as is known they have not yet moved into Canada.

U.S. May Scrap First-Strike Nuclear Arms

WALT ROSTOW
. . . new strategy

Weapons Exposed To Sneak Attack

CHICAGO (AP)—The Sunday Times said Saturday the State Department and Pentagon are studying a strategic plan under which the United States would renounce striking a first nuclear blow except in retaliation for a massive conventional attack.

The newspaper said in a Washington dispatch that the plan is incorporated in a 265-page document prepared by Walt W. Rostow, former White House defence adviser who now heads the State Department's planning staff.

OFFICIAL POLICY

It added that the plan is being reviewed for possible adoption by the National Security Council as the official defence policy of the United States.

The article, by Thomas B. Ross, said: "Rostow's plan recommends a revamping of the nation's arsenal to eliminate first-strike weapons — bombers and missiles that are vulnerable to sneak attack and, therefore, reliable only for striking the first atomic blow.

'DON'T RESTRICT HIM'

"At the same time, the plan cautions that the nation may not be properly armed for a [illegible] strategy for many years and President Kennedy should not now be restricted in striking first if necessary.

REJECTED

"However, the Rostow plan flatly rejects the concept of preemptive attack—hitting an enemy first on intelligence reports that he is about to hit you.

"The United States should strike a first atomic blow, Rostow argues, only in retaliation for a massive conventional assault, say a big push by the Red army that threatened to engulf Western Europe."

Angry Whites Protest Death Decree

ALGIERS (AP)—Algeria's Europeans rolled down their shop fronts and walked off their jobs Saturday in a protest strike against the death penalty handed ex-general Edmond Jouhaud, a leader of the terrorist Secret Army Organization.

Jouhaud himself sat in his cell in Santa Prison in Paris. Despite his refusal to ask President Charles de Gaulle for mercy, his lawyers were going ahead with a clemency appeal.

In both Algiers and Oran the death penalty angered the European populations opposed to Algeria's independence. Businesses closed, most of the gas and electricity services went off, schools shut down, buses stopped running, and postal and telephone service was hampered.

In Algiers, the secret army kept up its campaign of terror against French authority and the Moslems.

OAKVILLE, Ont. (UPI)—Nineteen persons were injured last night in a two-train collision in Oakville.

Adenauer Upset By Berlin Plan

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP)—German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer was reported Saturday to have objected strenuously to new United States proposals for Berlin, which in his view would move toward recognition of Communist East Germany.

Two days before the start of a new round of U.S.-Soviet talks on a possible Berlin settlement, crucial tensions appeared to be building up between Washington and Bonn.

LACK OF CONFIDENCE

Press reports from Bonn indicated sharp displeasure with the trend of U.S. thinking and a lack of confidence in where the Kennedy administration would draw the line on accommodations of Western policy with Soviet policy in its attempt to reach a settlement.

Informants here said Adenauer had made his objection known in unmistakable terms. Diplomats said he seemed to be annoyed and upset by indications he saw in the U.S. negotiating plan that the Kennedy administration is willing to move toward at least a limited, practical recognition of East Germany.

TO MEET MONDAY

Four main proposals were set forth in the U.S. working paper submitted to Allied governments for comment and—Rusk hoped—approval.

FREEZE BORDERS

Adenauer is said to have objected, among other things, to a provision for freezing the present demarcation lines which divide East Germany and Poland, and East and West Germany, on the ground that this would give new prestige and respect to Communist East Germany.

Apparently Adenauer objected also to modification of a U.S. proposal for an international authority to operate the Berlin supply lines. Under this proposition as it now stands the East Germans apparently would have an important role to play, giving them a basis for claiming de facto recognition by the Western powers.

Cuban refugees greet wounded prisoner

* * * * * *

Prisoners Return To Cheers, Tears

MIAMI (AP)—Sixty wounded and ailing survivors of the Cuban invasion, still wearing their prison uniforms, limped down the steps of an airliner Saturday into the arms of their joyously weeping families.

Thousands of exiled Cubans thronged Miami Airport to greet the first men liberated since Fidel Castro's forces rounded up the invaders nearly a year ago.

ON CREDIT

The prisoners were released on credit. Members of the negotiating team which went to Havana to confer with Castro about the release said that so far not a cent has changed hands.

The returnees pledged they will go back to Havana's Principe Prison voluntarily unless a way is found to free their comrades-in-arms. They set no deadline for their return but a negotiating team member quoted Castro as telling the captives that he expects all will be out within three months.

WOULD RETURN

"We shall consider ourselves prisoners until the last one of our companions is at liberty. Should our companions not be set free, we would return voluntarily to the Castillo del Principe," said a spokesman for the invaders.

CRITIC DALI

Dali Irks Dali

The surrealist painter disapproved of the staging of a musical fantasy in which he collaborated with French choreographer Maurice Bejart. He said certain essentials were missing such as "a skinned ox, a real lion, a streetcar and 25 motorcyclists."

Dali was in the grand box for the show at the theatre Royal de La Monnaie. He saw only the first 15 minutes. Then he rose from his seat and shouted amid uproar: "I am going away. Goodbye."

Bomb Blast Kills Man Damages U.S. Consulate

CARACAS (UPI)—A bomb has exploded in the U.S. consulate in the Venezuelan city of Puerto de la Cruz. U.S. embassy officials said the explosion killed one man and wounded another. The bomb caused considerable damage to the consulate offices.

Subpoenas Issued For Steel Firms

U.S. marshals were set to serve the subpoenas which demand that the firms produce cost records for the Senate anti-monopoly group headed by Sen. Estes Kefauver.

The action was clear evidence that the threat of both congressional and justice department action still hung over "Big Steel" even though the industry surrendered to President Kennedy in the struggle over the price hike.

Neutrals Accept U.S. Tests

GENEVA (UPI)—Three of the eight neutral nations at the disarmament conference have accepted the U.S. view that atmospheric nuclear tests are necessary if there is no policed treaty banning them, informed sources said Saturday.

Diplomats said Sweden, Brazil and Mexico had dissociated themselves from the Soviet demand—and an Indian appeal—that the U.S. refrain from testing while the conference is in session.

The U.S. also has won assurances from all eight neutrals that they will remain at the conference even after the U.S. renews atmospheric testing.

U.K. Doctor

Red Tape Hobbles Medicine

By BOB PETRICK

The present British national health service was described as a "vast, complicated, inflexible, bureaucratic system" by a British medical and dental man Friday.

Dr. John Bunyan, inventor of the "Bunyan Bag" which saved thousands of burn cases during the Second World War, said under the present system doctors and dentists were subservient to bureaucrats.

'PALATIAL OFFICES'

"The only new medical buildings since the war have been the palatial offices of the regional boards totalling 10 times the costs of the original estimates," he said.

"Conditions are so bad it is almost impossible to get nurses," said Dr. Bunyan. "In 10 years time when new hospitals are built half of them will be unusable because of the lack of nursing staff."

Dr. Bunyan spoke at the Victoria and District Dental Society meeting yesterday.

Eye-in-Sky Maps for All

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Weather Bureau will begin daily international broadcasts today of cloud maps based on photos received from the Tiros IV weather satellite.

The radio facsimile transmissions will be beamed to more than 100 countries, including the Soviet Union.

The bureau said the program will be conducted on an experimental basis for two months and will be continued if foreign weather services indicate they can make significant use of the maps.

Maps based on Tiros photos can be used to improve weather analyses and forecasts, to warn of previously undetected storms, and to brief pilots on their weather conditions over trans-oceanic flight routes.

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

There is no death chamber at the Good Shepherd Animal Shelter, 4151 Borden.

Since the shelter opened in December, 1960, only two of its animal guests have been "put to sleep"—as too sick to recover.

One had a broken back and bad distemper; the other had a hopeless case of distemper. Both were taken away by veterinarian Dr. Leonard Hurlov.

Mother Cecilia Mary, founder of the Order of the Sisters of the Love of Jesus, who started the animal shelter, voices her belief as follows:

"The animals were created by God just as we were. Respect for all life . . . What God has created we can't destroy."

But Mother Cecilia Mary isn't picking quarrels with the SPCA, where some unwanted animals are destroyed.

Resigned as Prioress

Mother Cecilia resigned last November as prioress of The Priory, home for aged people operated by Sisters of the Love of Jesus.

Now 72 years old, she devotes all her time to animal welfare. She has been interested for many years in caring for animals.

The veterinarian, Dr. Hurlov, calls regularly to check the health of the 40 dogs in the shelter.

A building for cats is now under construction, and more rooms for dogs are to be added.

The shelter is a pleasant leafy place at the end of a street. When I visited there yesterday, a volunteer lady was taking a plump and glossy keeshond (Dutch barge dog) for a walk.

"This dog was so thin and scabby, it was pathetic," she said.

In Spotless Rooms

Dogs live in spotless rooms, each with a raised human-like bed. They never have commercial dog food or horsemeat—only beef and beef heart and liver.

Mother Cecilia Mary conducted me around the kennels, where assorted dogs sniffed my hand through wire windows. Some stood up inquisitively on their hind legs, like small bears.

Dogs at the shelter have been nursed back to health after veterinarians had given them up for dead.

One keeshond came to the shelter with pneumonia, distemper and a temperature of 106. The veterinarian gave it no chance to live.

But the sisters coaxed it back to life with oxygen and tender care.

Aim of the shelter is to restore sick and hurt animals to health and find homes for them—not any kind of homes, but places where there are sympathetic humans and a room for a dog to run around outdoors.

Homes are currently sought for Labradors, pure-bred cockers, boxers, border collies and dogs of mixed ancestry.

The shelter—and new offices to be set up nearby—serve as headquarters for the National Catholic Society for Animal Welfare.

City Old Vic Players B.C. Drama Choice

By BERT BINNY

Three of the five competing drama organizations in the Southern Vancouver Island festival which ended last night took all six awards; two each.

Best actress was Moira McColl, Maurya in the Old Vic Players' production of Riders to the Sea, the best production.

RIDERS CHOSEN

Riders to the Sea was chosen for the B.C. finals in Dawson Creek May 28 to June 2.

St. Matthias Little Theatre's John Poulton as Andrew Crocker-Harris and Ken Bailey as Frank Hunter in the Browning Version were best actor and supporting actor.

BEST VISUAL

Harlequinade, produced by St. Luke's Players, provided best supporting actress, Paddy Hayward as Edna Selby, and was best visual production.

GOOD SUPPORT

The Browning Version's support had two runners-up—Basil Issigonis and Nigel Goode. Third runner-up was Harry Lukey.

The final program at Oak Bay Junior High School last night was off to an excellent start with Evanne Murray, Margaret Martin and John Drean of the Windsor Players in Ralph Corson's immensely amusing The Sisters McIntosh.

FINAL ITEM

J. M. Synge's drama, Riders to the Sea, completed the program.

Adjudicator Anne Mossman found this play "quite a theatrical experience; a slice out of pure Irish life." And she congratulated the entire cast on a fine performance.

The adjudicator found The Sisters McIntosh extremely well done.

"The author," said she, "would have been vastly flattered. I myself didn't know this play was as good."

But Miss Mossman felt that a cast of such obvious talent and ability might well have played better material.

A White Butterfly was the first presentation Friday night and the adjudicator praised Barbara Grant, Dorothea House and John Drean but said the play needed more vivid contrasts.

The chamber suggested a $5,460 annual wage ceiling be imposed on applicants for jobless insurance.

Chamber officials said yesterday their plan had been incorporated by the national organization in a brief to the royal commission on unemployment insurance.

Abbreviations on Prescriptions As Useful to Us as A.M., P.M.

By JOSEPH MOLNER, MD

Dear Dr. Molner: What does "t.i.d." mean on a prescription? And some of the other abbreviations? Why not change to plain English?—K. J. P.

"T.i.d." means "ter in die," which translated is three times a day. Sometimes "t.d." and "ter die" are used.

There are some good reasons for continuing to use these terms. One is brevity. A pharmacist understands these directions. The terms have become the "language of his profession." "Aq." is the classic abbreviation for aqua, or water. Why change, so long as everybody understands?

"P.c," is "post cibos," or "after eating." "O.D." has come to mean right eye or "oculus dexter," and "O.L." is left eye. "Sig." means write or label. And so on.

No doubt we could devise a new set of abbreviations—but this would take time, and I suspect that it would have no particular advantage over the present system.

It is the same in a good many other things, too, you know. What about "a.m." for morning and "p.m." for afternoon?

Dear Dr. Molner: My husband gets a blur in his eyes. Sometimes while driving he will pull over to the side of the road and wait until he can see better. He is 72 but in good health except for overweight. What should be done about this?—MRS. E. T.

This is a potentially serious symptom and should be investigated. Causes may range from eye disease to heart or circulatory trouble. So have him see his doctor.

Dear Dr. Molner: I find that I can go to sleep easily if I imagine I am gazing at a lot of green leaves and trying to count them, or counting sheep as they jump over a fence. Also if I count backward, 99, 98, 97, etc.—W. J.

Dear Dr. Molner: Some years ago I had an operation for hemorrhoids. Now I apparently do not have enough muscle tone to be completely successful. Are there exercises I could do?—MRS. A. J.

I'd suspect that a narrowing, or stricture, of the area has resulted from scar formation. After this type of surgery, it is important to have follow-up care involving dilation of the area to prevent adhesions until healing is complete. I don't think it's a matter of muscle tone; I don't think exercise will help; I do think a medical checkup will make life much easier for you.

New Battery — Bacteria Bypassed

By RALPH DIGHTON

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Science marches on—so fast sometimes it overtakes itself.

This happened in the new science of using garbage and sewage to generate electricity.

While one firm was demonstrating a radio transmitter powered by garbage-eating bacteria, another firm was demonstrating it could get similar results without using bacteria at all.

A third firm, which claims it really started it all by inventing the first bacteria battery more than two years ago, was quietly simmering—unable to say anything because of military security. It has a contract to develop such batteries for navy ships.

The bacteria idea came first. These single-cell plants, so small that billions could hide under a dime, break down complex materials into simple materials. In the process they give off electricity.

The latest idea is to bypass bacteria completely.

"Bacteria are much too temperamental," says Dr. Milton Allen, director of chemical research at Electro-Optical Systems Incorporated. "they're like humans—you can't depend on them."

Instead of using bacteria directly, Allen uses their end-product—enzymes. After all, he says, it is the enzyme, not the bacterium, which converts waste material into electrical energy.

One of the food substances in human waste is sugar. To make one of his simpler "biochemical batteries" Allen puts sugar in one cell and oxygen in another. Then he adds enzymes to the sugar. The enzymes break down the sugar molecules, scattering electrons of the nucleus of the sugar molecules.

Some of the whirling sugar electrons pass through a membrane between the sugar and scatter the oxygen electrons. Pretty soon there's a steady flow of lectrons each way through the membrane. This sets up a small electrical current.

Allen has set up several kinds of batteries, with different enzymes and "foods." One of them has produced up to .0009 volts.

Allen's newest battery doesn't even use enzymes.

Lawyers To Plead For General

PARIS (AP) — Lawyers for former General Edmond Jouhaud said yesterday they will appeal to President de Gaulle to spare his life, even though Houhaud himself refused to ask for mercy.

Condemned to death as a leader of the terrorist fight against Algerian independence, Jouhaud faces the guillotine or firing squad unless de Gaulle steps in.

Defence counsel Yves Perrussel said Jouhaud had informed his lawyers he did not wish to seek clemency from de Gaulle. But Perrussel said he and his colleagues felt an effort should be made on the Algerian leader's behalf.

Big Event Too Much

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) —Belle the elephant gave birth to a 34-inch baby at the Portland Zoo yesterday —the first elephant birth in the U.S. in 43 years.

Both Belle and the baby were doing well but zoo director Jack Marks collapsed from exhaustion shortly after birth and an ambulance rushed him to a hospital.

Peek-a-Boo Poet Pesters Beautiful Brigitte in Bed

FLORENCE, Italy (AP)—Domenico Buono, 33, a persistent poet seeking first-hand inspiration from Brigitte Bardot, finally made it into her chamber. Alas, bard Buono spent the night in jail.

The Italian, twice thwarted in efforts to reach the French actress, pussy - footed into BB's bedroom Friday night to get, he said, inspiration for his ode The Beautiful Dreamer Asleep in the Woods.

The beautiful Bardot awoke in her bed. Instead of waiting for a reading, she sat up in her nightgown and screamed.

From adjoining bedrooms rushed her former husband Roger Vadim, directing her in a movie being filmed at the hotel, and her co-star, Sammy Frey. They held Buono until police led him away to a Florence prison on Miss Bardot's complaint of unlawful entry.

The poet Buono got close to this inspiration last week when he managed to rent a room next to BB's even though the movie company had taken over most of the hotel. Early Sunday morning BB dashed out of her room and complained to a hotel porter that someone next door was keeping her awake.

The hotel management knocked, police said, and out walked Buono reciting: "You are my shell . . . my pearl . . . I love you, Brigitte . . . Brigitte."

Police then told Buono to leave town. He did, going to Verona — where Romeo courted Juliet—after first filing his own complaint that Vadim's movie people had had him sequestered.

Kennedy Impressed

Ex-Junior Officer Watches War Games

WITH KENNEDY AT SEA (AP)—The Navy gave President Kennedy a deafening display of its air, sea and land punch Saturday, causing the former junior officer to exclaim: "Isn't that terrific!"

As the president leaned on a hangar deck rail of the nuclear aircraft carrier Enterprise, an armada of interceptors and attack bombers hurled bombs and rockets and strafed a target trailing 1,500 yards behind the huge ship.

WITH A KA-BOOM!

The Enterprise shook as destroyers loosed depth charges 700 yards off its bow. Off to the starboard side the guided missile frigate Dewey fired Terrier rockets at a Drone target. Thunder split the sunny skies as fighter planes catapulted from decks of carriers.

To the more than 20,000 men assembled on 49 ships, Kennedy broadcast a message expressing his appreciation for the display. He said he was returning to Washington with new "confidence and hope."

SHAH AT SIDE

The president then went ashore by helicopter to watch Marines storm Onslow Beach, N.C. Kennedy sat in a bleachers, the visiting Shah of Iran at his side, as four reinforced battalion combat teams raced ashore from landing craft. Another team was dropped on the beach by giant helicopters.

Playful Nip Locks Up Young Lion

SEATTLE (AP) — A nine-month-old lion nipped a boy Saturday and police said the animal would be kept locked in a basement until the Humane Society decides what should be done.

DEEP SCRATCHES

Michael Riccetti, 10, said he was playing with the lion when it "started chewing my chest." He suffered deep scratches.

Sgt. V.C. Berg said the lion was bought at an auction in Tacoma by Keith Rhinehart, 27. Rhinehart has been keeping it in a house which he shared with a half dozen other young men.

CLAWS PULLED

The female lion, named Tmmy, weighs between 100 and 125 pounds. Its claws have been pulled.

"I've been a policeman 25 years," said Berg, "and this is my first lion call."

RICHARD BOWER, Editor-in-Chief

Amalgamation Study

CITY COUNCIL although disappointed in its earlier, rather unreasonable but insistently-held hopes for a formal, provincially-controlled study of metropolitan government or other unification for Greater Victoria, commendably has now agreed to co-operate in an informal but serious study by a Chamber of Commerce committee.

Saanich council probably can be expected with assurance to take the same course, for although it rejected the formal-study proposal, its bare-majority decision apparently would have gone the other way had the plan been to look at the present facts and figures of amalgamation in a non-binding fashion.

But the attitude of Oak Bay and Esquimalt municipal leaders toward the Chamber of Commerce survey, which has the worthwhile aim of comparing costs of municipal services with and without amalgamation, is cause for misgivings.

Neither council has yet considered the request for its help in the survey, but the two reeves have shown themselves adversely prejudiced. Reeve Wurtele in particular sees a new study as "pointless, unless it is done at the intermunicipal committee level."

It should not be forgotten that Reeve Wurtele, Reeve Murdoch and their councils, resisting a survey in the form Victoria proposed, unanimously suggested as an alternative that they be supplied with a brief on the merits of an investigation and further set forth that they would discuss metropolitan government and amalgamation in the intermunicipal committee without any strings attached and then would gladly put the matter to their ratepayers in a referendum.

If they then were sincere in their statements, they can now surely have no good cause for hesitation in providing utmost co-operation (at little if any cost to their taxpayers) in the Chamber's study. And conversely, reluctance to give such co-operation must appear as evidence that they had no intention of joining in an examination at the intermunicipal level, but were merely bent on frustrating a new effort to lay the pros and cons of amalgamation before the people of Greater Victoria.

Lost Accord?

AS LEADER of the Liberal Party Mr. Lester B. Pearson broke a long standing Parliamentary tradition by usurping the normal perquisite of the opposition party's financial critic by taking it upon himself to personally lead off the budget debate.

The majority of Canadians can be freely forgiven if they are now wondering why he bothered to go to the trouble.

Mr. Pearson's objections to the budget, though a fine exercise in sophistry, neither presented anything new that could be even remotely interpreted as constructive criticism aimed at the betterment of the national economy, nor contained enough validity to constitute a serious challenge to the present administration.

His main argument was directed against the government's continued policy of deficit financing—an argument he salted well with sage hints that had the Liberals been in power things would be very different indeed.

But how different would they be?

For the past two years the Liberal Party has been outdoing itself in making expensive promises to the Canadian people, inextricably pledging itself to spending far more money than the present Conservative government if it is ever given the chance to take over the Ottawa reins of office.

Among the things it says it would do is to institute immediately a national health plan under which all costs of doctors, drugs and medicines for all Canadians would be paid by the government. Costs of such a program have been estimated at anything between $500 million and $750 million a year.

Further to this the Liberals have assured the public that they would reduce income tax, extend unemployment insurance benefits, increase all pensions, put more money into national housing schemes, and be more generous to provinces and municipalities.

Pushing the Job

MR. GEORGE CHATTERTON has been pushing the progress of the planned new terminal building at the Patricia Bay Airport, and there is now some definite hint that it will soon be under way. Whatever the current traffic ratio the present building is a poor hostel for the arrival of air visitors to the capital city; it will be a distinct asset when it is replaced by a modern and up-to-date centre.

This has seemingly been an on-again-off-again project for so long there have been cynical doubts about it ever coming to fruition, although perhaps the drop in air patronage at Patricia Bay could well have excused the federal authority from going ahead with its plans. A fine, well-handled terminal with all the needed facilities is an invitation to more traffic, however, and the present lull should give way to better patronage in future.

Cheaper fares of course would be a stimulant, and it would seem better to fill a plane at lesser rates than have it fly half empty because of high ticket cost.

Mr. Chatterton himself was impatient at the delays which have occurred but having studied the relative data at first-hand in Ottawa he realizes they were justified. In all the new program designed for the airport involves the expenditure of $2,500,000 covering runway extension, apron and tarmac renovation and the terminal building. This is a major operation which will be valuable to this area and a very satisfactory move by the transport department.

The necessary highway relocation has been in progress for some time and Mr. Chatterton advises that tenders for the terminal building will be called sometime in July. If acceptance and order placing takes place very soon thereafter construction should begin before the fall sets in and be a beneficial factor in the local employment picture.

Apparently the terminal building will be somewhat smaller than originally envisaged, but it should be of ample size to cope with the traffic flow for some long time to come and provide amenities of a quality now lacking. Mr. Chatterton is to be commended on his efforts to have the Patricia Bay airport brought up to desirable modern standards.

Thinking Aloud

". . . of shoes, and ships, and sealing wax . . ."

BY TOM TAYLOR

FOR want of a nail a kingdom was lost and for want of paint the City Hall was nearly lost. Well, it was painted five or so years ago but the new centennial color scheme has opened Victoria eyes. They find the venerable structure pleasing. And its architectural style not to be discounted for a box of concrete and steel. It is in the heart of the city, too, and coming back afresh into the hearts of the citizens. One shouldn't idly throw away a building become historic by age and association. Let the city fathers ponder well before turning thumbs down on a civic headquarters now shining in fresh glory. Let them instead give the inside a face-lift, too.

AS far as I know there were no disabled folk in the Klondike. The race, and the gold, went only to the swift and the strong. But the Rotary Club has other ideas. Out of strength should come goodwill for those less physically spartan. That idea is the core of the two "Klondike Nights," April 24 and 25, aboard the CPR's Princess Marguerite in the local harbor. Goodwill Enterprises, which opens up a new life for many disabled Victorians, will be the beneficiary. The old Klondike evenings of song, dance, games and lovely belles — bewitchingly attired, of course—will be recreated. Well, to a degree anyway. This, after all, is Victoria, not the Klondike. But there are two nights of fun ahead and anyone can join in. All that needs doing is to get a ticket in advance. And the quiet workers at Goodwill Enteprises will be blessed.

BERNARD Shaw said youth was wasted on young people but now I am not so sure. I have been looking at a picture of 600 UBC students bent over their desks on examination papers. Going through agony. Wracking their brains for the right answers. At least we adults are spared that ordeal. Often I wish I could roll back the years, but . . . Would I like to be one of those 600? Allow me to dodge the question. They are probably much smarter than I was, anyway.

A NIGERIAN MP urges that Britain be expelled from the Commonwealth. This is a new twist. Like sacking the old man once the sons have come of age and got the key of the door. I can think of a few members more needing expulsion, in truth. But the Nigerian needn't worry. Perhaps they'll all be sacked, in a manner of speaking. The Commonwealth has few unified ties of concept and sentiment left. And if Britain joins the ECM its days, I think, are numbered. Nigeria can then start an African ECM, of course, and in essence there is one in progress now. A black-skinned one. I doubt if it will enrich the world more than did the old Commonwealth, though.

LIVE dangerously, they tell young people eyeing the world's oyster with ambitious eyes. We are all living dangerously these days. Never did international anguish permeate so many minds. Never did world crises, erupting like perennials in the garden, impinge more deeply on the common man. I heard a fine analysis of these crucial times from the luncheon lips of UBC's Dean Soward. There was one comforting feature. Neither East nor West wants to push the other to the point of no return. That accounts for the hot and the cold spells that cheer us one day and put us in the dumps the next. We're living dangerously, all right. So if this means adventure we are having lots of it. But keep your spirits up. Posterity may yet record that we were valiantly patient.

South African Budget

Skilful Political Manoeuvre

By BERTHA SOLOMON from Johannesburg

THERE is no doubt that the Afrikaner, particularly the Nationalist Afrikaner, is an astute politician, far more so than the English - speaking South African. As the latest instance, witness the "invasion scare" thrown at the country by the minister of defence.

Speaking in the Senate he announced categorically that certain "Afro-Asian nations are secretly planning an invasion."

As a preliminary to a budget which raised defence spending to (for South Africa) astronomical heights in peacetime, it was a skillful manoeuvre, though hardly a far-sighted one for a country that needs to attract capital, not frighten it away.

But as an attempt to develop a war psychosis, to rally all the whites into the Nationalist camp under threat of invasion, it failed. The country still remembers the same minister's last blood - curdling speech about "Armageddon with cavalry, and blood up to the horse bits." There is clearly more than a touch of the flamboyant and the melodramatic about the minister. So that finally the prime minister himself had to take the air out of the minister's statement in the budget debate the following week.

"There is no need to panic," Dr. Verwoerd told the country. There was no immediate danger of an invasion. Although some African states had said they were organizing against the republic he thought that their threats were mere boasting. Which they probably were.

As Sir Francis de Guingand, Lord Montgomery's chief-of-staff, who now lives in South Africa, summed up the situation, an invasion of South Africa by an African army of liberation would be "extremely hazardous" for the invaders, and would be "very difficult" even if supported by a major power.

After all this, the country's reaction to the "barricade budget," as it was promptly named, with its staggering 67.3 per cent increase in defence expenditure, which is bound to push up the cost of living, was mild and philosophical.

One thing, however, that the war scare debate did do is to bring home, for the first time to the ordinary citizen, South Africa's complete isolation in the world today. Now that she is out of the Commonwealth she stands, in the words of one of the senators, "naked and exposed in an unfriendly world," without a single treaty of support.

From the warmth and comfort of a family circle, that is the position to which Nationalist intransigence has reduced the republic — a frightening thought in today's world. Also, the discerning noted that the government is voting six times as much for defence as it is for its Bantustan schemes—six times as much for destruction as for construction, and all in the sacred name of self-defence and preparedness. Against whom? Internal or external foes? That is the question.

There are some, too, who believe that the war scare was part of a softening-up process. They believe that it was a deliberate action of the government's in the cause of white unity — that is, in the cause of deliberately driving all the whites into the Nationalist laager. And in Parliament, to some extent, it succeeded. The United Party opposition naturally promptly pledged itself to rally to the government in the event of invasion from without (but that does not necessarily mean also in the event of trouble within South Africa).

But apparently the man in the street was not much affected, despite the fact that increasingly, and very cleverly, the government is doing its best to put across the idea that in the republic's present circumstances any deviation from Nationalist policy is subversive of South Africanism.

In fact, these deliberate attempts to drive all the whites into one laager are now having a reaction which Dr. Verwoerd, as a psychologist, might have foreseen. So far from the scare uniting the nation—now apparently Dr. Verwoerd's main objective — the present triumph of Afrikaner nationalism, with its complete break from everything British, has engendered a bitterness amongst some English-speaking South Africans here almost equal to the bitterness which existed among Afrikaners after their defeat in the Boer War. And on bitterness you cannot build unity, as the Afrikaners themselves have abundantly proved.

This bitterness between the whites in South Africa is the country's major tragedy, and there seems no foreseeable end to it as long as the country's children are kraaled off in separate schools—into, that is, English-speaking schools and Afrikaans-speaking schools, depending on the home language —so that they never meet in their formative years.

But, with all this political strife, the country's economy is extraordinarily resilient, and it is advancing in every direction. For instance, the fantastic Western Deep Levels mine, already 8,000 feet down and slated to reach 12,000 feet into the bowels of the earth, will, it is forecast, prove itself one of the wonders of the world in gold production.

And now the government has announced an enormous scheme for damming and diverting the waters of the Orange River, one of the country's major rivers.

It will probably take 30 years to carry out the scheme in its entirety. But when complete it will change the geography and the fertility of the whole area, and make a garden out of what is now a heart-desert. The scheme is on a par with the country's general development, but it will clearly need not only millions, which the government is prepared to spend, but also more immigrants if it is to succeed.

The government seems to have realized that, too, at last, for, having badly missed the bus for immigrants in the postwar rush from Europe, it is now planning to get some from Kenya. The whites in that uneasy territory now, on the eve of independence and African rule, are sitting on their suitcases, as it were, and the government here is offering money and accommodation to the estimated 20,000 who are likely to leave Kenya.

Dateline: Europe

Element of Risk

By OTTO VON HABSBURG

IN a few days the authorities of the Common Market will have to study the problem of an agreement between the European Community and Israel.

The question has been placed on the order of the day since the visit of Jewish Finance Minister Levi Eshkol in Brussels, and especially since the latter's conversations with German Economics Minister Ludwig Erhard. The Israeli declared that for his country the rapid conclusion of an agreement was "a question of life or death."

Mr. Eshkol's statement is not exaggerated. Seventy per cent of Israel's exports go to the countries already members of the Common Market or getting ready to join. Israel's trade balance is not favorable: $135 million of exports face $240 million of imports.

Until the end of 1962 this is not tragic. The deficit is more than balanced by capital imports and especially by German reparations. The latter come to an end this year. Israel must hence balance these deliveries by increased exports.

In order to gain a favorable starting point, Israel has liberalized its economy to make it fit for international competition. Nevertheless it must not be placed in a position of inferiority in dealing with the countries of Europe.

Though the Israeli demand is logical, it meets some difficulties within the Common Market due to Arab pressure. Cairo threatens economic reprisals. This in itself is not tragic but brings about an understandable nervousness among European states, which, like Germany, for instance, have recently made serious expansive efforts in the Islamic world. Europe's consent will hence mean a genuine sacrifice.

Of major interest will be the form of Israel's association. There is talk of an agreement on the Greek pattern. Without trying to pre-judge what the responsible officials will decide, experts underscore certain important considerations which should not be forgotten.

If we want Israel to be more than a passing adventure, like the Crusader Kingdoms, it is imperative that the state become sooner or later an integral part of the Middle East. Lasting survival is only possible by a true agreement with its neighbors. Peace demands a harmonizing of the economies.

From this point of view Israel's association with the Common Market, justified in today's perspective, has an element of danger. It increases the bridgehead character of the young state, always a risky position especially in times of international crisis.

It would hence be wise to avoid in the association agreement the clause of the Greek treaty, which foresees automatic full membership in the Common Market after 20 years. Furthermore, a provision ought to be included which would allow Israel to take back its freedom of action in case an agreement with states of the Middle East becomes possible. Influential European interests are afraid of such a special statute. Their fears are justified from a business point of view. They should nevertheless step into the background in view of the true nature of the agreement. In this particular case, political considerations should have a decisive weight in the best interest of all concerned.

Park Preservation

By GREGORY CLARK

THE thousands of people who are interested in preservation of some portion of the natural wilderness that is so fast vanishing all over the continent were profoundly shocked by the recent calm announcement by two ministers of the Ontario provincial government that if minerals are discovered within the boundaries of provincial parks, mining interests will, of course, be permitted to engage in mining operations. The statements were repudiated a few days later.

Nobody knows the true weight of public opinion with regard to situations like this. There are in Ontario a number of organizations devoted to conservation. There are large naturalist societies, numerous smaller organizations of amateur naturalists, sportsmen's associations large and small in almost every sizeable community, a Conservation Council consisting of both professional and amateur components, and an unknown number of non-members of such bodies the size of which can only be guessed from the fact that the sale of books on natural history is very large in Canada, over 80,000 copies alone of Roger Tory Peterson's "Field Guide to the Birds" having been sold.

Obviously what is needed at this crisis in the struggle for preservation of the wilderness is a national organization such as the Canadian Audubon Society, to which all kindred bodies large and small can be affiliated in order to impress governments as well as promotors with the power of public opinion. And the affiliation can come none too soon.

Titanic Tragedy

By G. E. MORTIMORE

OUT-OF-WORK men rioted in New Zealand and Newfoundland, 25 years ago.

Naval reserves and two squadrons of mounted volunteers were called in to control mobs at Auckland, where hundreds of unemployed fought police, smashed and looted shops.

Jobless thousands stormed the colonial parliament buildings in St. John's, Newfoundland, and forced Sir Richard Squires, prime minister, to run for his life.

Lieutenant-Governor J. W. Fordham Johnson prorogued British Columbia's 17th legislature.

Victoria voters approved a $500,000 unemployment relief by-law.

The $6,000,000 White Star superliner Titanic struck an iceberg and sank, 50 years ago.

More than 1,500 people died in the North Atlantic with Britain's "unsinkable" luxury ship on the calm night of April 14-15, 1912.

The great ship carried only enough lifeboats for half the people on board. Her captain ran her at full speed through the dangerous North Atlantic. The wireless operator was too busy with greetings to bother handing over the iceberg warnings.

The Titanic's boasted watertight compartments failed to save her when a floating chunk of Greenland ice laid her hull open along its length.

She sank in two hours 40 minutes.

The reputation of Cowichan district as a bit of England was in the making, 75 years ago.

"Monday last was observed by many of the good people of Cowichan as a holiday.

"In the afternoon a large number of young men assembled at the institute hall, Quamichan, and a spirited game of cricket was played.

"The organization of a cricket club and the introduction of this good old English game into Cowichan is due to new arrivals from the old country, some of whom handle the bat with great dexterity.

"The number of improvements being made in the district is very marked. Mr. Crosier, one of the most energetic of the newcomers, has since his arrival last August gone extensively into the work of clearing his land. He has already chopped 50 acres and being a gentleman of means will doubtless soon make his place one of the best in the district.

"A large number of strangers have been around lately, spying out the land and asking farmers to fix a price on their property. None, however, have sold with the exception of Mrs. Monk who has disposed of her property to Mr. Maitland Dougall for $3,000.

"Very nearly all the wild land in the district has been taken up back to the mountains and is being improved by the holders."

Fortunatus

By KATHLEEN BLANCHARD

VENANTIUS Honorius Clementianus Fortunatus was born in Ceneda, Italy, in 530.

He grew up wishing more than anything else to excel in beautiful language. He was to become the chief Latin poet of his age. At Milan, he studied with the best minds of the day and exercised his ability in disputing. When he was 35, this accomplished and elegant young man traveled to France, arriving at Sigbert's court in time for his wedding to the renowned beauty the Princess Brunhild, a union which was celebrated with much splendor.

Inspired by the occasion, Fortunatus wrote a poem commemorating the happy event, an effort which made him famous. He was a welcome guest everywhere.

Journeying to Poitiers, he visited the zealous Queen Radegundis, whose husband, the Frankish king, had wished her well in her efforts to found a nunnery there. She made much of this charming man. She saw his great possibilities in the service of the Church of France. He was introduced to Gregory of Tours.

He was elected Bishop of Poitiers at the age of 69. Ten years later he died.

Fortunatus had written many poems, especially in his later years. These works were gathered together in numerous books. One of them contained the well-known verses, The Royal Banners Forward Go, which were translated by Dr. J. M. Neale.

Legend has it that Fortunatus wrote the hymn given, in 569, in honor of Queen Radegundis of St. Croix, Poitiers, having deposited a fragment of the true Cross in the convent of which she was abbess.

Sing, my tongue, how glorious battle
Glorious victory became;
And above the Cross, His trophy,
Tell the triumph and the fame,
Tell how He the earth's Redeemer,
By His death for man o'ercame.

Thirty years fulfilled among us
Perfect life in low estate—
Born for this, and self-surrendered,
To His passion dedicate,
On the Cross the Lamb is lifted,
For His people immolate.

His the nails, the spear, the spitting,
Reed and vinegar and gall;
From His patient body pierced
Blood and water streaming fall;
Earth and sea and stars and mankind
By that stream are cleansed all.

Faithful Cross, above all others,
One and only noble Tree,
None in foliage, none in blossom,
None in fruit compares with thee—
Sweet the wood and sweet the iron
And the Lord, how sweet is He.

Unto God be laud and honor;
To the Father, to the Son,
To the mighty Spirit, glory—
Ever Three and ever One;
Power and glory in the highest
While eternal ages run.

Maigret-Creator Steals Star Show

Simenon Enjoys Chat

Puffing on a gold-plated pipe, author Georges Simenon (centre) and his French-Canadian wife Denise from Ottawa, chat with author Rupert Davies at a London cocktail party. Davies plays the title role in the BBC television series Maigret, written by Simenon.

By ROD CURRIE

LONDON (CP)—It takes a bit of fancy footwork for a pair of behind - the - scenes operators to upstage a roomful of actors and actresses at a cocktail party.

But mild - mannered Georges Simenon, prolific author and creator of Inspector Maigret, and his vivacious Canadian-born wife do it without half trying.

The scene is a posh lounge at the new BBC Television Centre. Present are the cast of the TV series Maigret, a host of other actors, TV officials, publicity men and journalists.

The stars — there's no doubt about it—are Simenon and his French - Canadian wife from Ottawa, the former Denise Ouimet.

When the compulsion to write overtakes him, as it does four to six times a year, he works two to three hours a day, turns out a chapter a session, a book in about 12 days.

He confines himself to about one Maigret book a year. But he's vague about exactly how many books he has written since he started 41 years ago at age 17. The number, including about 150 written under 17 different pseudonyms, is approaching 500.

"Tell me, Monsieur, when was your last book published?"

"About two weeks ago, I think."

"What is the title?"

The Belgian - born Simenon draws thoughtfully on his pipe, then, a boyish grin spreading across his face, he admits: "I'm afraid you'll have to ask my wife—I don't seem to remember."

The petite, 41-year-old Mrs. Simenon, holding court in the midst of the other half of the party guests, does indeed remember. For she is the shrewd business head behind the operation, handling all the contracts, ensuring her husband's privacy when he's at work, guarding him against fans and unwanted guests, arranging his appointments and interviews and even selecting his pipes. There have been more than 40 movies based on Simenon mysteries.

It was in 1945 that Denise Ouimet, in New York between jobs, phoned Simenon to say she didn't want the job as his secretary. They met to talk it over, fell in love and were married.

Since then they have lived in 13 different places in the United States and Europe. Their present home is in Switzerland where they have lived for a record five years.

They don't take long trips often now—"after less than a week I am lonely for the children," Simenon says—but as a great pipe smoker he was lured to London for the annual dinner of the Briar Pipe Trade Association.

"Nothing but the best talk about men and their briar pipes would have made me leave home," he said.

Mrs. Simenon, who studied hard to learn the knack of selecting pipes, confesses she would like to smoke one herself. "But it is not feminine," she says, so she sticks to cigarettes. "I just light the pipe for Georges when he is driving."

LETTERS to the Editor

To be considered for publication in whole or in part letters must be on subjects of general interest, not more than 300 words in length, and, if signed with a pen-name, must be accompanied by the writer's name and address.

The many responses you have received regarding General Foulkes' warnings indicates that people are longing for real peace, but they are frightened by the implications of finding peace. The fears of a number of people appear to be that peace may mean weakness or vulnerability.

Those of us who attended the recent panel discussion held by the Canadian Peace Research Institute know that what these knowledgable men mean by peace is something quite different. The most significant point of the discussion was that until 15 years ago, the onset of the nuclear age, mankind's whole philosophy had been based on a policy of armed force to survive. This policy today is obsolete. Nuclear armed force can lead to only one eventuality: total disaster. The major powers possess the nuclear weapons today to destroy all life on earth four times over. This is what we should fear: nuclear war. We should not fear peace.

The aims of the Canadian Peace Research Institute are to study the methods of reducing national tensions and to discover the avenues which lead to methods other than force to settle our human differences.

The Moratorium

British history for the past hundred years has taught that nations which arm to the teeth always go to war. Perhaps the opposite is true now. We were also taught that when Russia, "The Sleeping Bear," woke up long enough to arm itself, it could become the dominant nation in Europe. Two world wars have proved this.

Germany gleefully consented to the outlawing of lethal gases, while secretly rearming with better weapons than those of the rest of Europe. She expected an easy victory before blockbusters could be invented.

Russia is not going to make the same mistake. She has been the most peaceable large nation of all of Europe. She does not trust American diplomacy which always ends with "Do it or else," and she knows that her possession of atomic weapons is a sure safeguard from war with the West.

We must search more deeply to eliminate the mistakes of the past, in order to safegusrd future peace. It does not come by disarmament.

Mr. Fleming's Budget

I should like to express my hearty disagreement with your editorial on Finance Minister Fleming's new budget.

It would have been tragic indeed for our country had the government dared to plunge the nation even further into debt by an increase in family allowances and few of the electors are likely to have found favor with the government for such a move under the circumstances. It is suggested that this is the main reason why is was not done.

The fact that is customary for all governments to pamper the voters when an election is imminent is acknowledged but it should also be stated that such a procedure is quite palatable when the annual budget is at least periodically balanced. Surely there is no room for complacency over the government's financial policies after its continuous record of staggering increases to the national debt and (worse still) the fact that there is a conspicuous absence of any promise to at least make an effort to balance the budget during the coming year.

No Example

NDP leader T. C. Douglas is doing the right thing to expose the chamber of commerce "freedom" drive by indicating the minority ownership and control of industry in Canada.

However, he has never adequately shown how state control can change this; neither can he show us an example of it anywhere.

Aside from what the Russian chamber of commerce may think about freedom—the laws of capital accumulation function as inexorably there as anywhere else.

To put control into the hands of all the people, and full rights for all minorities, the Socialist Party of Canada solution must be applied—common ownership everywhere.

Nylon Sausages To Carry Fuel

BRISTOL, England (CP)—Dracones, 150 - foot - long nylon and rubber sausages that can carry 26,700 gallons of diesel fuel, are being tested on Britain's 2,000 - mile inland canal system.

Dracones, from the ancient Greek word meaning "serpent," were invented by a Cambridge professor in 1956. Sea-going versions now are in use in many parts of the world.

Officials hope to prove that dracones can be operated in confined waterways and negotiate locks. It is claimed they will show considerable advantages in cost and flexibility of use.

The country's canal system was constructed in the 18th and 19th centuries and many sections now are obsolete because conventional barges cannot navigate them.

It is hoped the dracones, hauled by small tugs, will be capable of plying these waterways and make the system a practical economic concern again.

Notebook of Faith

Palm Sunday a Symbol Of Man's Golden Dream In True Kingdom of God

By ERNEST MARSHALL HOWSE

Palm Sunday may be considered the abiding symbol of one of mankind's golden dreams: the coming to earth of a kingdom more than earthly, a kingdom of this world which would really be the kingdom of God.

To be sure that dream has taken varied forms — some noble and some base. The pilgrims who hailed Jesus were beguiled by an ancient tribal hope that God's Messiah in human form might come to earth, with power to exalt His favorites and destroy their enemies.

Medieval Christians gave the dream another form, scarcely better, in the concept of the holy Roman empire. The reality was neither holy nor Roman nor an empire, but the dream was that a kingdom of righteousness would come when civil power was completely subservient to ecclesiastical. Some Reformation Christians had dreams strangely similar in their concept of a theocratic state.

"Second Coming" believers—as deluded as the most tribal of Palm Sunday pilgrims—are still filled with dazzling conceptions of a Deliverer appearing in the air, to smite the enemies of God and establish the rule of the righteous on earth.

Poet's Ancient Dream

"Bring me my bow of burning gold!
Bring me my arrow of desire!
Bring me my spear! O clouds unfold!
Bring me my chariot of fire!
I will not cease my mental fight
Nor shall my sword sleep in my hand,
Till we have built Jerusalem
In England's green and pleasant land."

The forms differ as men differ. They are coarse, selfish or exalted as men are coarse, selfish or exalted. Nevertheless, good, bad and indifferent alike, they, each in their own way, express man's groping after God's kingdom of righteousness and justice. They echo the supreme prayer, Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth.

Our recent years have been, as it were, a vaster Palm Sunday for all of us. We see Jesus coming, as it seems, to His crucifixion. Yet in a moment of religious devotion at the Easter season, somehow the faith still rings out that He will come into His kingdom. Though greater Herods, Caiphases and Judases still live, for a moment we sing Hosannah as though Jesus were on His way to a throne.

Lights May Go Out

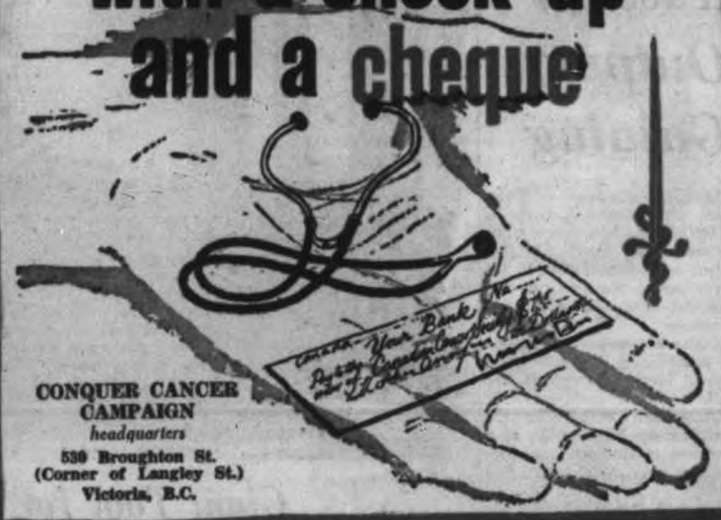

Yet the immediate outlook was never more ominous. If the reign of God seemed far away when the Pilgrims greeted their Messiah outside of Jerusalem, it seems no nearer on the anniversary of Palm Sunday almost 2,000 years later. Today we have to face the fact it is at least possible that all the accumulated treasure, both of western civilization and of the human race, may disappear with Nineveh and Tyre.

What then can we do today? Are we as helpless as the pilgrims who waved their welcome to Jesus, and saw Him next, despised and rejected of men, on His way to the crucifixion? Is the dear as far off as ever? We cannot know. But man's extremity is often God's opportunity. Palm Sunday may well remind us Christian people need to do more than cry Hosannahs to Jesus, while men of power plot their evil designs. The purposes of God can only be fulfilled as men becomes God's fellow-workers. Our part is not only to hail the coming King but to make the Kingdom come. The modern hymn still has its word for us:

"Rise up O men of God
His kingdom tarries long
Bring in the day of brotherhood

By ROGER LANE

NEW YORK (AP) — The crushing of an American steel industry bid for higher prices was a smashing personal triumph for President Kennedy.

The collapse may also have written a new page in the annals of United States presidential power.

It raised new and sweeping questions about the exercise of that power in the future and the traditional American freedom of business.

Asking Questions

Some business sources here were asking these questions, for instance:

Will aluminum companies, which cut prices in September, be able to raise them again without prior consent of the White House? Will industry-wide wage agreements be subject to White House scrutiny and pressure?

The instruments of power invoked by the president were many and varied. They were wielded with skill and lightning speed.

Brought News

The president swung into action within minutes of a visit Tuesday from Roger Blough, chairman of U.S. Steel, who brought the news of an immediate 36-a-ton increase in prices.

Only 69 hours elapsed before the price increase drive crumbled with cancellation of mark-ups ordered by Bethlehem Steel, the No. 2 producer, in the wake of Steel's move.

Basically, the president did these things:

1. Mobilized public opinion against the increase, drumming on the theme that major steelmakers were putting their industry and its profits ahead of the national interest.

2. Started a grand jury investigation of the increase. In this there was the threat of criminal prosecution of steel companies if evidence of collusive action was found.

3. Raised the possibility of justice department action aimed at breaking up U.S. Steel Corporation as a monopolistic concentration of economic power.

4. Ordered channelling of business by defence contractors and suppliers through steel firms that held the old price line.

5. Hinted a pullback by the treasury which has been working on changes in equipment depreciation regulations that would benefit steel companies.

6. The federal trade commission began an inquiry on compliance with a 1951 consent order against collusive pricing practices in the steel industry.

Power Wave

It was the third and greatest wave of power generated by Kennedy since last summer to influence events in the steel industry.

Amid speculation of a then-impending steel price rise, Kennedy last September wrote heads of the 12 biggest steel companies urging them to forego an increase.

Later White House pressure was exerted on the United Steelworkers Union to curb demands for bargaining on a new wage contract.

From the viewpoint of Blough and Leslie Worthington, president of U.S. Steel, the industry had a sound case for a price increase.

Partial Catch-Up

Worthington called the rise a "partial catch-up adjustment," seeking to minimize any connection with the new steel contract.

He stressed these main points:

1. Steel prices last were increased Aug. 1, 1958 by $4.50 a ton 3½ years ago.

2. Since then production costs had risen steeply, mainly because of increases in steelworkers wages and benefits.

Tightening Vise

3. U.S. Steel profits, caught in a tightening vise, had been shrinking steadily and hit a nine-year low in 1961.

4. The profit shrinkage handicapped raising the vast funds required for modern new production tools to meet growing competition from foreign steelmakers aided by efficient new plants and comparatively low-cost labor.

Reinvested Profit

5. Reinvested profit—that is, money left over for plowing back into the business after regular dividend payments—toboggained from $115,000,000 in 1958 to $3,000,000 in a $4,600,000,000 assets enterprise.

6. Research to develop stronger, lighter and more versatile steels is a competitive "must" for the future, and this can "only be supported by profits or the hope of profits."

'First Offender in Pyramid'

Texas Tackles Steel Union

HOUSTON (UPI) — The Texas Manufacturers Association yesterday adopted a resolution charging that President Kennedy should have criticized the steelworkers union rather than the steel industry for raising prices. The TMA board of directors said Kennedy should have found fault with the union as "the first offender in the pyramiding practice of wage-price increases rather than the party who, in the interest of self-protection, finds it necessary to increase its intake in order to meet the added cost forced upon him by the other party."

Russian Output Gaining

LONDON (Reuters) — Soviet steel production has risen by 26,000,000 tons in six years while United States production has fallen by 15,000,000 tons in the same period, Russia's top steel planning chief said in Moscow yesterday.

Viktor Khlebnikov said Russia is approaching the total steel output level achieved in the U.S.

Khlebnikov, quoted by the news agency Tass, spoke at a congress of the iron and steel workers union which ended yesterday.

He said Russia already has surpassed the U.S. in production of iron ore and of coke and is nearing American pig iron output.

Prophets Are Too Gloomy

Business Topics—By Harry Young

Professional economists are a lot too gloomy about Canada's economic future, according to D. W. Ambridge, outspoken president of Abitibi Power and Paper Co. Ltd.

"I have been struck by the chorus of gloom coming from these people," he said in his annual report. "We are told we had better look sharp if we are to survive in a world of powerful trading blocs already in existence, or soon to be created."

NEW CONDITIONS

The head people of Abitibi do not share those views. Mr. Ambridge is confident industrial leaders will be ingenious enough to meet any new conditions the future may hold, provided governmental agencies of all kinds do what they can to help.

"We in Abitibi recognize the solutions to the trading problems of the future will be different from the solutions which served us in the past, but we will find them.

WELL BE COPIED

"This is the sort of attitude that could well be copied by other leaders of industry. Too many of them are so busy finding new things to grumble and worry about they haven't time to get on with expansion of their activities.

Mr. Ambridge says his firm's newsprint sales are up 4 per cent from a year ago; fine paper conditions are good and the board business although spotty is better than a year ago.

"We are in fine health, busy, active and in most things successful," he told shareholders.

LIFE COMES FIRST

Investing in stocks, bonds and real estate is all right, says the president of one of Canada's big life insurance companies, but only after the individual has completed a life insurance coverage that will see him through all reasonable requirements.

A. S. Upton, president of Dominion Life Assurance Co., spoke during a visit to Victoria last week.

Mr. Upton is of the old school who believes nothing beats thrift and hard work. He frowns not on the use of credit but on the present-day abuse of it.

"People handle adversity better than they do prosperity," he added "and we have become soft with 16 years of continued prosperity. It alarms me a little."

BE FOUNDATION

Insurance should be the foundation of every savings plan, according to Mr. Upton.

"Do you know that right through the depression not one Canadian life insurance company failed to live up to every commitment it made? Every contractual obligation was met when and as contracted," he told me. "It created an impression upon me I never forgot."

BANK STOCKS

Once he has proper protection, a man is entitled to do what he likes with his money, and Mr. Upton admits he owns stocks and bonds, "but not before I had completed my life insurance program."

What does Mr. Upton think is a good buy in stocks?

Well he is cautious on that too. He likes bank stocks . . . "banks share directly in the growth and development of the country."

NO BITTER FEELINGS

Samuel Fingold, president of Slater Steel Industries which recently purchased 500,000 shares of Foundation Co. of Canada, says his firm became a large shareholder "as an investment only."

This, he said, was a measure of confidence in the present management of Foundation, which he said would continue to function, and Slater Steel had no intention of disturbing relationships with the company or between the company and its clients.

L. J. McGowan, president of Foundation, described a series of meetings between directors of the two companies as "harmonious."

SUCCESS FOR TWO

Two Vancouver Island life insurance men have been credited with outstanding sales achievements in 1961 by Occidental Life Insurance Co. of California.

They are J. R. R. Moffat of Nanaimo who wrote $3,881,406 worth of business and Gordon F. Champion of Victoria whose total was $2,744,571. Mr. Champion is shortly to become manager of Occidental's new agency office in Victoria.

BUSINESS DOUBLED

Toronto Stock exchange more than doubled the dollar volume of its business in 1961. Total of sales effected was $2,526,349,869 compared with $1,223,330,494 in 1960. The number of shares traded rose to 719,320,976 from 469,691,543.

Only New York and the American stock exchange did a bigger dollar value of business during 1961 and Toronto was second only to New York in the number of shares traded.

Canadian Ownership

Brazilian Traction Finances Forced Into Native Firms?

Holders of Brazilian Traction, Light and Power Shares may find themselves out of the public utilities business in Brazil shortly and into another type of activity in that country.

OTHER INDUSTRIES

As a result of talks between Brazilian, U.S. and Canadian authorities, it is understood Brazil will buy its foreign-owned utilities at an agreed price on the understanding the money will be re-invested in other Brazilian industries.

Brizilian Traction, largely owned by Canadians, has for many years been unable to withdraw profits from Brazil to meet all its dividend requirements.

While the payments have been made regularly on the preferred shares, only stock dividends or small cash payments have been allowed by the Brazilian authorities on the common shares.

SHARES RISE

The new agreement in principle on the foreign-owned utilities has been responsible for a rise in Brazilian Traction common shares of about 50 cents to $3.70 in the past few days.

State Care Law Changed

By SCOTT SCHILL

REGINA (CP) — Saskatchewan's CCF government Saturday put into law amendments to the 1961 Medical Care Insurance Act that relieve patients insured under the compulsory, comprehensive and prepaid scheme of liability for payments and court action for medical bills.

The plan, costing $21,000,000 in its first year of operation, will go into effect July 1.

The government majority carried the bill through second reading and third and final reading Saturday.

Then the legislature prorogued.

Provincial Treasurer A. E. Blakeney said the amendments would not limit the rights of the doctors. He said the principle of agency payment is "almost universally accepted" and does not affect the rights of creditors.

Doctors May Go

TORONTO (CP)—Dr. Arthur D. Kelly, general secretary of the Canadian Medical Association, said Saturday that many doctors—especially those originally from the United Kingdom — would leave Saskatchewan rather than tolerate amendments to the provincial medical care plan.

Empty Liner Sails

MONTREAL (UPI)—The Canadian Pacific luxury liner Empress of Britain, originally scheduled to sail for Liverpool April 6 with 900 passengers, sailed yesterday without a single passenger. When the St. Lawrence pilots' strike delayed the liner, all her passengers were taken to England by air or other ships.

Canberra To Miss B.C. Port

The 45,000-ton P & O-Orient liner Canberra will bypass Vancouver on this trip and return to England via Panama for mechanical repairs.

The liner was originally scheduled to leave Vancouver May 24 with a number of Vancouver Island and B.C. passengers bound for Hawaii, Australia, New Zealand and the U.K. via Suez.

The new schedule calls for Canberra to arrive at Honolulu May 30 and sail directly to Long Beach, skipping her regularly scheduled ports of call, Vancouver and San Francisco.

Holidaymakers who planned to return to B.C. aboard the liner from Hawaii will not be permitted to sail in her to Long Beach, because of regulations prohibiting foreign-flag ships from plying between two American ports.

Warren Titus, president of the line in North America, said in San Francisco he regretted the inconvenience to passengers caused by elimination of scheduled trans-Pacific voyage.

"We have made every effort to make alternative arrangements for the passengers planning to sail to Australia or New Zealand or from Honolulu to Vancouver," Mr. Titus said.

"Unfortunately, none of the company's other vessels can be substituted or rerouted."

Under North Pole

This United States Navy frogman swims under Arctic ice to take first photographs of the underside of the North Pole. American defence sources claim more money should be spent developing underwater demolition teams to counter possible enemy underwater saboteurs.

Big Nuclear Threat Looms Underwater In Enemy Frogmen

WASHINGTON (CP) — While North America bristles with radar screens, bombers and rockets, some defence department sources fear the great nuclear threat may come not from the skies, but from some sudden massive deployment of underwater saboteurs armed with nuclear bombs and nerve, germ and chemical weapons.

"We're still not fully equipped to handle this potential threat," said one informant who indicated he is having a stiff struggle trying to convince those who control the Pentagon purse there must be a greater effort to expand American underwater demolition teams as an offensive and counter-offensive saboteur force.

In contrast to rumors that the Soviet Union may have thousands of well-trained frogmen who could be carried to strategic and sensitive areas by an armada of some 450 submarines, the United States is reported to have fewer than 500 of these underwater guerrilla warriors.

'We Could Have More'

"We could have many more—more than the Reds—if we could convince others in the Pentagon of the great danger and the terrific success of these sea-going saboteurs," the informant said.

Clad in rubberized suits and equipped with flippers, oxygen bottles and special breathing apparatus, frogmen can operate from the Arctic to the tropics. They are trained to swim more than five miles at depths of between 60 and 120 feet. Some have swum at depths of more than 300 feet.

"They can operate almost silently and are difficult to detect with existing equipment. They can slip into harbors and shorelines; plant nuclear bombs and contaminate water supplies, demoralize and panic populations because there would be no warning."

Transferred from submarines to special small underwater craft, they could operate many miles offshore. American frogmen, or "seals" as they are called now, use an Italian craft for this purpose but research is continuing to develop new American propulsion units.

'Italy in Forefront'

"Of all the allies," said the informant, "Italy perhaps is in the forefront. Their frogmen did effective damage during the Second World War."

In one incident, six Italian frogmen — later captured — damaged two British battleships and a tanker in a single operation in Egypt's Alexandria Harbor in 1941.

"Italy trained her frogmen to be an elite corps, a highly specialized organization. While Italy co-operates with us under the North Atlantic alliance, she is inclined to be a bit tight-lipped about the full extent of her frogmen specialty. We could use more information from her."

Japan also worried the Allies in this line during the war years. Midget Japanese submarines, occupied by one or two men, formed a kind of human suicide torpedo difficult to stop.

"I'm just not satisfied with what we're doing," the informant continued. "We've got to increase our shoreline alert. And we've got to train more of these men, many more, to prepare in the event they are needed in limited or all-out war."

Birds Win Battle, Alf Wins Princess

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The 1962 schedule of the versatile Alfred Hitchcock takes him from man-eating birds to Princess Grace.

He was in puckish, chubby-cheeked self as I visited him on the set of his present production, The Birds.

"This might be called 'the birds' revenge'," he commented. "After all, birds have been put in cages, shot at and shoved in ovens by human beings for centuries. It's only natural that they should fight back."

They do in his movie. The scene is Bodega Bay, Calif., a weekend spot for San Franciscans. People don't notice at first that the local bird life is getting aggressive. They notice after a while.

"We'll have some fine scenes of birds pecking people's eyes out," the director said. "I can see it now — squeezed grapes hanging down the cheeks."

This is the man who gave you Psycho.

He said that he was working closely with the human people in use of the birds. So at least his bird actors are being treated humanely, even if they don't respond accordingly to the humans.

"The birds win," he declared. "Our two main characters Rod Taylor and a Hitchcock discovery, model Tippi Hedren manage to escape, but nothing is said about what future dangers they may face."

I asked him how he carried on the negotiations for hiring her.

"Oddly enough, I've never had any communications about it with her," he said. "It was all done through her agents. When the deal was announced, I did send her a cable. All it said was: 'That's an interesting development.' Nothing else."

Hundreds of Boys Enslaved

Supermart Of Crime

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Authorities in East Pakistan, spurred by a persistent newspaper crusade, are investigating the tangled skein of a kidnapping operation in which scores of boys were stolen from their homes, trained as criminals and sold as slaves to crime bosses.

Official action has recovered 64 boys in different parts of the province and restored them to their parents. Some 400 suspects were rounded up on kidnapping charges and 34 more were held on charges of attempted child-stealing.

The March issue of IPI Report, bulletin of the International Press Institute, tells the story and credits a Dacca newspaper man with bringing the undercover operation into the open. Serajuddin Hussein, news editor of the Bengali-language Ittefaq, launched his campaign last July and saw it bear first fruit some three months later when police recovered a group of missing boys.

Hussein began to suspect there was more than coincidence behind a continuing series of little items filed by correspondents about parents throughout the province reporting their children missing. He accumulated facts, dug for information and questioned officials.

On the basis of evidence published in Ittefaq, police raided a remote village 80 miles from Dacca and found it to be the hideout of a 40-strong band of kidnappers.

Boys ranging in age from seven to 12 were being trained as pickpockets, thieves, beggars and in vice. In some cases, police found, the gang had deliberately broken the arm or leg of a child to increase his value as a beggar.

The apprentice criminals were sold to crime organizers at prices ranging from $40 to $200.

When local police failed to trace one missing boy, federal police moved in and found him in a wild area of the province. An armed band of kidnappers ambushed the police party on its way out of the district, but the police and the boy escaped.

Did Old Canadians Say 'We're from Missouri'?

WINNIPEG (CP)—The Missouri River may yet prove of economic value to Canada's eastern Prairies.

Scientists now are testing in southwestern Manitoba in an attempt to discover what they believe may be the former bed of the Missouri.

Some believe the river, which appears in Montana and flows eastward through North Dakota before turning south to the Mississippi, once flowed northeast through Saskatchewan and Manitoba and emptied into Lake Winnipeg.

The theory is that about 12,000 years ago, during a glacial period, the river channel was filled with glacial sediment several hundred feet thick, diverting the stream southward into what now is the north-central United States.

It is believed, however, that because of the drainage pattern of the region, water still is flowing underground through the ancient channel.

Tests in the Estevan area of Saskatchewan indicate there is a water-saturated stratum 300 to 368 feet below the surface, from one to 3½ miles in width and 70 feet in depth in places. Tests in the area have produced as much as 3,500,000 gallons of water a day.

In the Brandon area of Manitoba, along the presumed channel of the river, artesian wells produce a heavy volume of water, indicating drillers may be tapping the same source.

The theory was first suggested in a report in 1957 by E. C. Halstead of the federal department of mines and technical surveys. In a map of the Brandon area the report plotted "a probable former river course" running from Brandon to the northeast.

In 1961 it was discovered that the Yellowstone and Missouri Rivers merge underground east of Estevan and that their courses continue back to the northeast.

Development of the water potential represented by the river could have long-range impact on the agricultural and secondary manufacturing industries of the regions through which it runs.

Recent surveys indicate that food processing plants could be established in the areas, with the assurance of a plentiful and continuous water supply essential to their operation.

Also, development of potash deposits along the Saskatchewan - Manitoba border could go forward with greater assurance. A plentiful supply of water is essential to these operations.

Already a Toronto company has leased 4,000 acres in the area to test the potential of the deposits.

It is hoped that if tests in the dry southwestern corner of Manitoba prove it feasible, water from the underground source can be combined with surface water to provide sorely needed irrigation to the area.

Train Congolese Officers

Mobutu Won't Take 'No' On Request for Canucks

U THANT
. . . first try failed

By BERNARD DUFRESNE

LEOPOLDVILLE (CP)—The possibility of Canadian participation in a retraining program for the Congolese army still is being discussed here despite the fact Canada says she cannot help.

Informed United Nations sources here say the Canadian government last January turned down a request by Acting Secretary - General U Thant for French-speaking Canadian officers to run a Congolese officers' school.

It is understood 20 officer-instructors would be required. Canada's decision is said to have been based on the fact the Canadian Army cannot spare more French - speaking officers than it now provides for the Canadian contingent in the UN Congo force.

The contingent includes about a dozen army and RCAF staff officers at UN headquarters and about 15 others with the Canadian signal unit which provides internal communications in The Congo. Fewer than half the total are bilingual.

UN sources hint Canada may be asked to reconsider its decision, especially since the request originally came from Gen. Joseph Mobutu, commander of the Congolese national army.

Mobutu is the calm young man in his early 30s who 18 months ago set himself the task of restoring law and order in his troubled country. He did so by deposing Premier Patrice Lumumba, later slain in Katanga, and setting up a government of young students until the politicians settled on Cyrille Adoula as premier.

Mobutu's request for Canadians to train his officers is based partly on his friendship with a number of French-Canadian staff liaison officers at UN headquarters. He is known to have been impressed by their ability and willingness to help The Congo and his army.

The UN's retraining program for the army calls for officer contributions from India, Tunisia, Greece and Argentina, among others. The key to the program would be officer-training by French-speaking Canadians.

Without the Canadians, Mobutu is said to see little chance of success in the program. Of the other countries to participate, only the Tunisians speak French. The Tunisians are not highly regarded by the Congolese, who consider the North Africans just as underdeveloped as themselves.

Mobutu is said to see in a Canadian - run officer school a way of getting rid of undesirable elements in his officer ranks, a process now under way.

Critic at Large — By John Crosby

A Look at Women's World

George Lefferts is a chunky, hard-bitten guy who is almost the last person you'd think of as the author, director, and producer of television shows with titles like: The Cold Woman, The Indiscriminate Woman, The Trapped Housewife, What's Wrong With Men? The Glamor Trap, and The Lonely Woman.

"I'm still standing up under the kidding," he'll tell you in tired tones, "but it's gone on all right. I've also had guys threaten to punch me in the nose for getting their wives upset over being 'trapped housewives' or suddenly finding out they should have fun sexually. But on the whole, it's been a great lark for me."

The Cold Woman, and the rest of them are the titles for some of the Specials for Women (the last of which, "The Problem Child," will be April 19, NBC) which started out as late afternoon shows for women alone. They were transferred to prime evening time at the request of the women who wanted their menfolk to see them. Did very well in the ratings, too.

"This is the first time in fifteen years of television that I've been left strictly alone. I have tried all the things I've wanted to try and this is the first time television has given me creative elbow room.

"I even did most of the interviewing for the shows myself. I used to talk to women on the NBC guided tours—you get a good national cross-section that way and also a good foreign cross-section. And all the women I spoke to weren't in the least reticent about giving me the story of their lives. Most people don't have anyone to talk to, I think."

The series and the interviews had changed his concept of women's role in society. "After the war, there was a basic revision of women's role and a social lag in our attitudes hasn't caught up with it. Never before have there been so many women who are self-sufficient, who don't need marriage for the same reasons they used to. Never have there been so many women educated for careers which they drop suddenly for housewifery. And there is a groundswell of female opinion against the attack that the wife, after being educated for a career, belongs in the home.

"Right now, we are at a very serious turning point. Either we're going to try and recapture the old days when the role of the woman was closely defined with little conflict or there's going to be an assault on male prerogatives."

This bothers him. In fact, a good deal of the thoughts stirred up by his own researching bothered him a lot; "I wondered suddenly if they weren't harmful, if some of these subjects aren't better left alone. But, as a man on one of our shows said: "Whenever we seek to learn the truth about us as human beings, it will be painful, disruptive, shattering.'

"Still, I kept wondering if I had the right to point out problems when help may not be available. But I decided either people plunge ahead in this direction or we all go back to soap operas and Westerns. Tranquillizers always have sold well but I don't think the public affairs shows should be tranquillizers as they are much of the time."

He feels strongly that the public has been conditioned to accept a bloodless type of documentary on subjects that should stir the pulse and race the mind. "Everyone in television steers clear of exposing real emotion," he said. "I think this is wrong. We have tried to present the attitudes and emotions as well as the facts. Here we try to capture the essence of reality. I mean the idea of having a baby is more important than the particulars of motherhood."

But Lefferts is fearful of the future. "Television is something to get out of, not into as it now exists. One has the feeling of rats leaving a sinking ship." He turned to another aspect which, I think, is both alarming and important. "The trend toward public affairs is a good one, but the danger is that public affairs themselves will become more and more sensationalized. 'Tonight we see 20,000 cannibals eat 7,000 missionaries in the jungle of the Congo.' That sort of thing.

"Television has to decide right now which way they want to go, because the outfits sponsoring these shows are the same ones who sponsored the Westerns. Real life is more powerful and unless a sense of responsibility is developed along with the techniques of the documentary, we'll be right back where we started."

He sighed: "But I'm tired and I'm resisting all offers to stay in television. Television—whatever else it is—is exhausting. I'm writing a play. I'm on my way out."

Grace Stole Our Story!

PARIS—Now that Princess Grace is going back to making films, we can tell the story of how she cost us $50,000 in our spare time. It is a story told without bitterness or recrimination.

Back in 1955 we paid a visit to an old friend in Monte Carlo named Father Francis Tucker, who is an American priest stationed in Monaco as rector of St. Charles Church. During a pleasant dinner we discussed the most pressing problem of the principality, which was how to get a male heir for the kingdom before Prince Rainier III knocked himself off in a racing car, or while deep-sea diving or big-game hunting or whatever. If Monaco didn't have an heir the principality would revert to France, and its tax-free, draft-exempt population would no longer find themselves living in paradise.

The problem was that Prince Rainier didn't seem to be interested in marrying any of the royal prospects in Europe. Father Tucker revealed to us that the only one the Prince might go for was movie actress Grace Kelly, whom he had met only once.

Therefore, the Prince and the priest intended to go to Philadelphia and pay another call on Grace Kelly, in hopes that something would come of it.

We wrote a tongue-in-cheek article titled, "If Grace Kelly Only Cared," and quoted Father Tucker as saying Grace Kelly alone could save Monaco by marrying his Prince.

A week later, Charles Feldman, an American agent and movie producer, said he saw a wonderful motion picture in the column we had written, and would we consider writing a screenplay. ("No one knows Rainier," Mr. Feldman said, "so we'll make the guy like Aly Khan.")

Since we had never worked on a film before, Mr. Feldman introduced us to Cy Howard, a Hollywood writer, who immediately demanded that Mr. Feldman pay us $100,000 for the script—$50,000 on completion of the writing and $50,000 when the cameras started rolling. Much to our surprise Mr. Feldman agreed to the terms.

We got to work on the script. We decided to lay the film in the principality at a film festival. The Prince character was a perfect playboy, constantly putting his life in jeopardy; our heroine was a beautiful but little known movie actress named Lily, whose film was being shown at the Festival. There was an American priest written in who was acting as matchmaker. Pretty soon we were turning out one hysterical scene after another. Cy had our word for this and we had his.

There didn't seem to be any rush about finishing the script, since Mr. Feldman seemed to be casting around for an unknown to play Lily. We knew this because, every once in a while, we'd be walking along the Champs-Elysees with Cy and meet Mr. Feldman with a lovely young actress on his arm, and he'd say to us, "Boys, wouldn't she make a wonderful Lily.?"

This would be our cue to say: "She's perfect," and then Mr. Feldman would dismiss us and walk up the Champs-Elysees arm in arm with the excited girl gushing beside him.

In the meantime we read somewhere that Prince Rainier had gone to America with Father Tucker, but we didn't give it any thought. Who needed them anymore?

Then one day the Associated Press ticker started to ring, and the frightening word BULLETIN appeared on the teleprinter.

This was followed by the word "Philadelphia," which was followed by the sentence, "Mrs. John Kelly has announced the engagement of her daughter Grace Kelly to Prince Rainier III, ruling monarch of the principality of Monaco."

"Cy," we said, trying to control our voice, "Grace Kelly is going to marry Rainier."

"She can't!" he screamed hysterically.

"Why not?"

"Because we'll sue her. It's our story. We thought of it first."

But we didn't sue her. We covered the wedding. Cy went back to Hollywood and Mr. Feldman had the unpleasant task of breaking the sad news to all the Lilys.

The only reason we're mentioning all this is that if Princess Grace is looking for a good story for a picture, we wish she'd call us. We have a script that just can't miss.

$249,000 Schooner Auctioned for $1,150

LUNENBURG, N.S. (CP)—A once-luxurious yacht purchased by an American millionaire for $249,000 in the 1920s has been auctioned off for a mere $1,150 following several years of legal wrangling.

Originally christened the Ramallah, the 94 - foot racing schooner was well known along the Atlantic coast, especially off Bermuda, in the late 1920s and early 1930s.

More than 10 years ago the late Capt. Archibald Publicover of the La Have River community of Dublin Shore, N.S., purchased the yacht. For about six years she lay moored neglected at a La Have wharf.

In 1959, Sheriff D. J. Bourque seized the vessel after she was towed into the harbor here for debts owing. Other financial problems followed and the end result was the auction block.

She was purchased for private use by Cmdr. Herbert Smith of HMCS Cornwallis near Digby, N.S., and Robert Purdy of Deep Brook in the Annapolis Basin area of western Nova Scotia.

Bushman Takes Cold Better Than Whites

SUFFIELD, Alta. (CP)—There's something about an African bushman that makes him better able to stand the cold than the white man.

Exactly what it is scientists are not sure but they have found that it's more than simply a matter of environment.

Dr. J. Hildes, director of the medical research unit at the University of Manitoba, made experiments with the bushmen in the Kalahari Desert in South West Africa.

He told about them at a meeting of the western regional group sponsored by the Medical Research Council of Canada and the National Cancer Institute.

The experiments were carried out under auspices of the U.S. Air Force. Dr. Hildes chose the bushman because he wears nothing but a loin cloth and an occasional skin cape and sleeps outside in all seasons despite a nighttime temperature that often drops to freezing.

The bushmen, a nomadic people, eat fruit, roots and nuts as well as game which accounts for 25 per cent of their diet.

Bushmen and white members of the research team ate identical meals and then slept out in pairs, each rolled in a blanket. Recordings were taken of internal and skin temperatures, foot temperatures and shivering.

The result was to confirm that under identical circumstances the bushman's response to cold is different from the white man's.

Communism with a Juke Box Reigns in East Bloc's Paris

By LOYAL GOULD

PRAGUE (AP)—Communists call this Czechoslovakian capital the Paris of the East bloc. There are night clubs, strip joints, jazz spots, swank restaurants—all the things the Communists usually condemn as evidence of capitalist decay.

You see people pretty well dressed. Stores seem well stocked. Restaurants serve international foods. Strip dancers peel to Cole Porter's Love for Sale. You can order scotch whisky, bubbling Crimean champagne and Hungarian wines.

This is a showcase for communism, not only for Westerners, but also for visitors from the rest of the Communist world—except Albania and Red China—and from the emerging African and Asian nations the Communists want to woo.

"It's all part of a grand plan," said a Western European businessman who visits often. "They want to remove from communism the symbol of a badly - clothed, unshaved fellow poised with a bomb."

But communism under the regime of President Antonin Novotny exists behind the glitter of Prague. There are the secret police and many curbs on freedom of the individual.

They do their best to stop Czechs from making contact with foreigners, even with those from the rest of the Soviet bloc.

The night life seems gay to the visitors, but to the Czech it is nothing like the "golden Prague" of the past.

"Look carefully," said an elderly Czech who knows Western life "and you'll see that nothing is done with the lightness and the ease you find in the West. It's too forced here. There's no freedom in it."

Though they are much better off than people in most Communist countries, Czechs complain. Their biggest complaint is lack of freedom.

If the tourist could see the realities of Prague, he would not see non-Communists shot in their beds any more. He would see a more subtle side of Communist ways.

For example, a pensioned Czech suspected of "ideological deviations" is judged by a neighborhood committee that decides whether his pension should be reduced.

Entertainment Parade

Cantatas Break Spring Lull On the Calendar

By BERT BINNY

Following three dozen variegated performances last week, the entertainment calendar is now just about blank until April 25 when the International Dance Festival and the revue April Melody run side by side over four days.

Two cantatas are scheduled for this evening.

The senior choir of Oak Bay United Church will present Maunder's Easter Cantata, Olivet to Calvary, at 7.30 p.m. The choir is conducted by R. Kroeger and the solo parts will be sung by choir members.

A Lenten cantata, the Triumph of the Cross by H. Alexander Matthews will be sung by the choir of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, also at 7.30 p.m.

The soloists will be Kathleen Paulin, soprano; Georgina Harper, contralto; Norman Tyrrell, tenor; John Bray, bass. Organist and choirleader is C. C. Warren.

The Greater Victoria Schools' Symphony Orchestra is presenting a concert on Wednesday at Victoria High School auditorium.

At 4 this afternoon, at Christ Church Cathedral, there will be a performance of Bach's cantata, Let Us Go Up to Jerusalem.

Choir Recital of Motets

The soloists here will be Eleanor Ashford and John Dunbar with an instrumental accompaniment by conductor Richard Proudman, virginals; Gustave Lamberts, cello; Woodford Garrigus, oboe, and Catherine Shore on the gallery organ.

The contracts have now been signed for the appearance on May 10 at the Lincoln High School auditorium in Portland of the Victoria Scottish concert, Swing o' the Kilt.

Swing o' the Kilt also appears at Courtenay on Saturday.

The Central Island Drama Festival with 13 plays on the program (April 25 to 28) will be held in the Ladysmith Senior High School auditorium; not, as previously announced, at the Ladysmith Little Theatre.

Curtain time is 8 each evening: doors, 7.30.

Impossible Happened in Gypsies' Tent City

By Jurgen Hesse

Two vintage cars rumbled over the grass-sand combination beach, came to a stop and spilled their contents—Senor Gomez and his wife, Senor Cortez and his wife, grandpa Cortez and a flock of 20 children, rolling, tumbling, falling, screaming and cajoling all over the place.

Senors Gomez and Cortez parked their prehistoric vehicles at a 90-degree angle, unrolled a large canvas, spread it over the cars, rammed several poles into the ground and put the finishing touches to their itinerant free-air home within 30 minutes.

Beneath the canvas, in semi-darkness, mothers Gomez and Cortez built a fire, put the kettle on and brewed coffee. Meanwhile their 20 offspring launched a strategic attack upon their copious body fleas, went reconnoitering the neighborhood and touched a few tourists for a penny or two.

My three friends (two photographers, one painter) and I had pitched our tent 50 feet from the Gomez-Cortez tent city. With breathless fascination we were watching the spectacle of a half-civilized clan setting up its household.

Senor Gomez ambled over to our tent::

"Got a piece of string, fellas?"

We had. He shuffled away, tying two broken poles together, thus preventing the canvas roof over his domain from collapsing.

"This is our chance," I said to my friends. "You just stay behind and watch me make contact, O.K.?"

I walked over to the Gomez-Cortez burg. Mother Gomez was peeling potatoes, while her healthy two-year-old son scrambled onto her lap, towards his mother's ample bosom. (Gypsies as a rule breast-feed their children up to three years, thus establishing very close family ties and saving money, besides.)

"Bonjour," I said to Senor Gomez in my rather halting French. "We are not normal tourist people but newspapermen from Germany. We would like to speak to you and your family about the way you people live."

He gave me a long, hard look with his coal black eyes. Then he nodded slowly.

What I hadn't thought possible happened—I had overcome the inborn wariness Gypsies had cultivated over the centuries when meeting non-Gypsies, or Gadschos, as they call us.

From then on, we were frequent guests at the Gomez' and Cortez' impromptu villa.

Both families were Spanish Gypsies, living in southern France where authorities are more lenient than in today's Spain. They had come to Les Saintes-Maries-de-la-Mer (The Holy-Maries-on-Sea) in the Camargue to participate in the two-day annual pilgrimage of Gypsies to their patron saint, La Sainte Sara (Holy Sara).

For centuries Gypsies from all over Europe travel in treks to this small village in the Rhone delta, about 100 miles west of Marseille in southern France.

For two days, May 24 and 25, up to 7,000 and more Gypsies congregate, following the call of their Catholic church to a magnificently colorful assembly of the last nomads in Europe.

They arrive in rickety, horse-drawn carriages, in beat up old cars, or in flashy American cars pulling block-long trailers.

But whether rich or poor, these Gypsies know of no status symbol during their reverence to La Sainte Sara, but join in a symbolic pilgrimage to the Mediterranean Sea in a trance-like state, chanting:

These Gypsies each year commemorate the miraculous landing of two Holy Maries and the Holy Sara at Les Saintes-Maries-de-la-Mer in the year 40 A.D. The legend has it a raft with 17 Christians aboard had been put to sea off Egypt and strong currents had drifted the destitute group to the French Mediterranean coast.

Senior Gomez probably didn't know much about the old legend, for he refused to talk about it. What he, his friend Cortez and both their families wanted was to take part in the pilgrimage, a break in their life of going from city to city, from hamlet to hamlet in an effort to scrounge a meagre living for the many hungry mouths.

He and Cortez were pedlars of fabrics, with the growing up children helping in their daily door bell routine.

That same night, my three friends and I sat in with the Gomez-Cortez clan to an improvised dancing-drinking-singing festivity beneath the canvas roof.

Senor Gomez played a Flamenco tune on his battered guitar, Senor Cortez sang in a rusty voice, old man Cortez clapped his hands to the rhythm and Solange Cortez, the 15-year-old daughter, danced a baile Jondo.

We had brought bottles of red wine with us that were being emptied by one and all—not excluding the six-year-olds.

When the cacophony reached its height, Senora Cortez, who was at least six months pregnant, indignantly shoved aside her daughter Solange and performed a truly masterful Flamenco dance, loudly acclaimed by her clan.

The next morning, May 26, 1957, when we got up at 9 a.m., the place where the Gypsy clan had been camping the night before, was empty.

All the nomads had packed at daybreak and left for their unending itinerary without a goal.

Scots Beat England

Ipswich Takes Over Lead Again

LONDON (Reuters)—Burnley was beaten 3-1 at home by Manchester United Saturday, faltering in its bid to emulate Tottenham Hotspur's double English Soccer Cup victory and league championship last season.

The defeat cost Burnley its lead in the First Division, with Ipswich Town taking over the top spot after a 1-0 home win over Cardiff City.

Meanwhile, Scotland won the "British International" championship for the first time since 1961 with a 2-0 victory over England.

The Irish Football Association Cup final at Belfast saw Linfield shut out Portadown 4-0.

The English League play left Ipswich with 50 points from 38 games and Burnley with 49 points from 36 games. Each club has a schedule of 42 games.

FEELING STRAIN?

Burnley seems to be feeling the strain of chasing both league and cup honors. In its first 29 league games this season it amassed 90 goals but since then it has netted only seven in seven games.

Having reached the cup final by beating Fulham in last Monday's replay, Burnley was expected to shake off its defensive complex Saturday.

But Manchester's Irish international fullback, Noel Cantwell, scored the opening goal in the 38th minute and Seamus Brennan increased the lead with a penalty.

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP)—Defending champion Mike Souchak and Billy Casper, playing in the final threesome, moved into the 54-hole lead of the Greater Greensboro Open Golf Tournament Saturday with 207 totals.

They head into today's final round of the $35,000 tournament with a two-stroke edge over ugly but ever - dangerous Sam Snead and Jerry Steelsmith, a young redhead seeking his first victory on tour.

Souchak shot a one-under 70 and Casper a 68 for their 6-under-par totals at the three-quarter mark.

Snead, who has won here seven times, including the inaugural in 1938, moved up with the day's best round, 67. Steelsmith, who played with the co-leaders, shot 70.

DON'T BUY ANOTHER PACK OF CIGARETTES

UNTIL YOU READ THIS.

SPECIAL BULLETIN: Canada's first international length King Size Filter cigarette is here now. This is the original King Size filter cigarette, invented by the Rothmans Group in 1951. Since then, smokers in over 140 countries have made it the world's largest-selling King Size Virginia cigarette.

Rothmans King Size is 85 millimetres long. [redacted]

Most Canadian cigarettes are 72 or 74 m.m. [redacted]

See the difference? Rothmans King Size is a good 18% longer than short cigarettes. But it sells at the same price!

The extra length means an extra half-inch of top quality Virginia tobacco in every Rothmans King Size. That's why it's so fully packed and rich in flavour. The extra length of Rothmans King Size also adds a great deal of smoothness to the cigarette. Extra smoothness and extra mildness, too.

Giants Bomb Reds, 13-6 On Four-Homer Attack

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Willie Mays failed to hit a home run Saturday but teammate Orlando Cepeda hit two. So did Felipe Alou and San Francisco's rampaging Giants soared to their fifth victory without defeat, roughing up the Cincinnati Reds 13-6.

Pittsburgh and St. Louis also are unbeaten in the National League but the American League's last undefeated team was knocked off when Cleveland thrashed the Washington Senators 6-4.

The Pirates made it three in a row, defeating the New York Mets, who have yet to win a game in three attempts. The Los Angeles Dodgers beat the Milwaukee Braves 5-4 on Lee Walls' single with the bases full and none out in the ninth inning. It was another defeat for Warren Spahn, who hasn't beat the Dodgers in their home park since Aug. 21, 1948.

The Giants scored in each of the first six innings, finishing Sam Ellis off in the third with a six-run explosion. Rookie Gaylord Perry didn't have much more on the ball than his Cincinnati counterpart. He gave way to Don Larsen who pitched 6 1-3 innings and gained his first National League victory.

Curt Simmons pitched a seven hitter, banged three safeties and fanned 11 to win for the Cards. Don Cardwell, Cubs ace, was charged with his second loss

SIX FOR PHILS

The Phillies were held to six hits by two Houston pitchers but a couple of bunts, an error and a couple of pop fly hits accounted for the winning runs.

Bill Mazeroski hit a home run, Dick Stuart a triple and Roberto Clemente two doubles and a single to do most of the damage in the Pirates' triumph over the Mets. Vinegar Bend Mizell, with the relief help of Elroy Face in the eighth, won his first game of the campaign.

Ralph Terry failed to last six innings for the Yankees but an early 7-1 lead helped carry him to his second triumph. Phil Regan, the Detroit loser, lasted less than four innings. Elston Howard and Cletis Boyer, with three hits apiece, shared hitting honors with Blanchard. Norm Cash had two homers for the losers.

Nine pitchers trudged to the mound in the 32-degree weather in Minnesota. They issued 21 bases on balls, struck out 23 and threw four home run balls. The winner was Ryne Duren and the loser was Georges Maranda.

Leafs Not Afraid of Hawks or Fans Want to Wrap Up Series in Four

. . . who's afraid?

TORONTO (CP) — Coach Imlach of Toronto Maple Leafs said Saturday he's not afraid of either Chicago Black Hawks or their fans, who have a reputation of making it rough for visiting teams.

"We won't be intimidated by either the Black Hawks or their crowd," Imlach said as he ran Leafs through a one-hour practice in preparation for tonight's third game of the Stanley Cup final. Toronto won the first two games of the best-of-seven series.

Tonight's game will be televised on channels 2 and 6 and broadcast on CBU starting at 6 p.m.

Tales of the antics of frenzied Chicago fans have drifted this way, but Imlach doesn't put much stock in them.

SAYS NO NONSENSE

Aside from the shenanigans of the fans, Imlach said there'll be "no nonsense" from Leafs.

"They'll play as hard as they can. After all, why should they work five more games when they can do it in two."

Imlach refuses to predict the outcome of the series, but those in contact with the Leaf coach feel he figures he can win the cup.

UPSET MONTREAL

The Hawks upset Montreal Canadiens in the semi-final last year and went on to defeat Detroit Red Wings to win the Stanley Cup. Both series went six games, the same number Hawks needed to upset Montreal in this year's semi-final.

The only change in the Leaf lineup will be the inclusion of left winger Bert Olmstead, out since March 11 with a cracked bone in his shoulder. The veteran Olmstead will likely see only sporadic action for a while.

Most likely to be benched to make room for him is right winger Eddie Shack, who sat out two games in the semi-final against New York Rangers and has seen little action since.

Pilous Plans Line Switch

CHICAGO (AP)—Some line-switching may be the strategy of the hard-pressed Chicago Black Hawks in trying to turn the tide against Toronto Maple Leafs as Stanley Cup championship play resumes tonight.

Trailing two games to none, the Black Hawks will welcome the roar of the wildly-partisan Chicago Stadium crowd, another capacity 16,666, after a lonesome time of it taking 4-1 and 3-2 trimmings in Toronto.

The setting is the same for the Hawks as in the cup semi-final series when, after losing the first two games to the champion Canadiens at Montreal, they returned home to launch a four-game sweep to gain the finals.

OBSERVERS AMAZED

There is nothing quite like a Chicago hockey crowd and Hawk observers were amazed in Toronto to find Maple Leaf fans cheering only when cheering was warranted, refraining from smoking and generally disporting in gentlemanly fashion.

In Chicago, the hockey addicts not only are constantly vociferous, but also occasionally demonstrate unerring marksmanship with a wide variety of missiles to express violent disapproval of the enemy.

In girding for the third game of the best-of-seven title scrimmage, Hawk coach Rudy Pilous indicated he might shuffle his various lines against the Maple Leafs, who like to butt heads jus' as well as the defending Stanley Cup champs.

Broders Win In Overtime

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Lethbridge battled through three overtime periods Saturday night to defeat London 92-90 in the deciding game of the Canadian Senior Men's basketball championship.

Toronto Drivers Win Canada Car Rally

VANCOUVER (CP)— Victory apparently went to a Studebaker Lark Saturday night as the 4,000-mile Canadian Auto Rally ended in the rain on a note of high drama.

Drivers John Jones and Lou LaLonde of Toronto pulled into the finish line at a plush waterfront hotel and said they believed they had lost no more than a couple of penalty points on Saturday's mountain drive west from Trail.

The coveted manufacturers' team prize went to the trio of French-built Renaults, but only after an hour of nail-chewing anxiety.

TROUBLE NEAR HOPE

The third team car was known to be having serious engine trouble in the mountains coming down towards Hope. Drivers John Charters of Baie d'Urfe, Que., and Ian Worth of Lachine, Que., finally arrived only 20 minutes away from disqualification, with their rear-mounted engine rattling its bearings.

"We've been limping for 150 miles," said Charters.

The car may have piled up enough penalty points to knock it out of the top 10, but the team prize was assured to the Renaults if they simply finished within the maximum time limit.

The other manufacturers' team entries were eliminated earlier through loss of one of their cars.

The results will not be official until the rally organizers compute the final standings, a job expected to last until the early hours of today.

BULLETIN

VANCOUVER—Stan Austman's Saskatoon rink, which averaged 24 years of age, won four compact cars early this morning at Kerrisdale Arena by defeating Lionel Wood's Edmonton rink, 10-6, in a final playoff set up after Austman had won B section.

Linescore:

Wood	002	000	101	11x	—	6
Austman	200	211	010	00x	—	10

VANCOUVER (CP) — Stan Austman and his crack Saskatoon rink laced Lionel Wood of Edmonton 9-3 in 11 ends Saturday night to force an extra sudden-death match in the final of the Vancouver spring car bonspiel.

It was a vastly superior performance by the Austman rink under the skipping of Merv Mann. Wood tried various strategies after he dropped behind in the second end, but each proved a blunder.

Austman blanked the first end, and Wood's misses in the second, third, fourth and fifth end made it 6-0. The rinks alternated singles through the next six ends and Wood finally quit on the 11th.

Austman's victory put his won-loss record in the double-knockout series on a par with Wood, thus forcing the do-or-die match.

Austman defeated Jimmy Shields of Calgary 10-7 Saturday afternoon and moved into the final.

With an earlier 14-end, 7-6 victory over Walt Ashlee of Dawson Creek, B.C., the win gave Austman the B bracket title and a crack at A event winner Wood.

Austman had to beat Wood twice Saturday night.

It's Written in Stars

Sports Signs Look Good

By OSCAR FRALEY

NEW YORK (UPI) — If you fished after 6.36 a.m. today you wasted your time, Sonny Liston should win the heavyweight title in June, Mickey Mantle and Willie Mays will have good seasons and Arnold Palmer has a great chance of scoring his Big Slam this year.

It's all right there in the zodiac.

That means, as I understand it in a book sent to me by a friend, the way your life is affected by the moon, the stars and the various planets.

Personally I have seen my share of stars from time to time and nobody can convince me that it's a good thing for the shape of your features. There also are those who contend I've sat around in the moon and taken on a little too much shine from time to time.

DENT FENDER

But, as I get it, a lot of people swear by this stuff called astrology. And this little book, Madame Lasagna, gives you everything but the time of day you shouldn't step off the curb in front of a bus. On what are noted as "good days," is is presumed that if you step in front of the bus all you do is dent the fender.

Anyhow, I have looked up the future portents for some of my athletic heroes and it makes for interesting observations.

Consider the possibilities for Liston, who some time in June fights for the heavyweight title. All I can say is that Floyd Patterson better be careful what date he picks. The even numbered days are "adverse" for him and Liston has only four "bad" days—June 12, 20, 25 and 27. If they fight on the 12th it shapes up as a turkey. It's a bad day for both of them.

BE CAREFUL

Palmer, who last week won the Masters, has his heart set on a "Big Slam" of the U.S. and British opens and the P.G.A. Well, Arnie had better be careful on the final day of the open at Oakmount.

That's the one bad day of his whole competitive setup. All the rest of the days in those three events are going for him—as well as the fact that he's a helluva golfer.

Mays and Mantle have it going for them with 65 "good" days during the season against only 28 "adverse" days. On the in-between days they'll probably have to settle for triples.

BEST DAYS

As for you fishermen, the zodiac says that during the summer the best time for angling is from sunrise to three hours afterwards. And you can tell me about it when you get back.

One more thing. Use bait.

Whites Blank Cadets For Midget Rugby Title

Vancouver Meralomas won the senior division, 10-8, from James Bay Athletic Association.

Saanich Inlet fishermen are going to have a boat launching ramp this year, at last, but it won't be the provincial recreation department ramp which was promised by Recreation Minister Earle Westwood for three years ago.

The ramp will have a 17 per cent grade, will be decking out to the water and solid fill beyond that. It will carry 100 feet out in the water to obtain a suitable grade.

"We are going to show them it can be done," said Jim.

Father, Harry Gilbert, has a second project underway. He is equipping a big and deep lifeboat with comfortable living quarters and plans to take off cruising with his wife almost every weekend. But first will come a bus trip to the World's Fair on April 29.

Big changes are afoot at Deep Cove where Sydney Rogers, formerly of Gordon Head, has purchased Century Marina, renamed it Deep Cove Marina and is planning some extensive expansion.

Holder's Boathouse will have their boats in the water in a few days.

Mrs. Horace Pratt reports negotiations for sale of the Deep Cove Chalet to a California man are almost completed, but that she expects to continue to operate it at least for part of this summer.

At Canoe Cove, Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Kent and daughter, well known to Cowichan Bay fishermen, have taken over the concession.

James Bay Anglers are getting well ahead with building of a new clubhouse and restrooms to provide better service for the hundreds of Victoria fishermen who use the launching ramps and they plan to call an early general meeting to map out this year's derby plans.

At Oak Bay Boathouse we found an air of anticipation and a little anxiety as they awaited the results of next Tuesday's municipal vote on the proposed $424,000 marina, to replace the existing facilities which are under a cloud of being condemned by the fire marshall.

Their big fear was that, with so little opposition shown to the proposals, those in favor might not bother to get out and vote, and the project just could fail through lack of a 60 per cent affirmative vote.

Esquimalt Anglers' Association plans to change its annual Labor Day coho derby dates to fit in with the Esquimalt Golden Jubilee celebrations Aug. 25 and 26. A general meeting to discuss the proposal will be held April 26 at the Fraser Street Scout Hall.

The Victoria Shrine Club has scheduled its annual fishing derby for June 15 in Saanich Inlet and plans the biggest prize list of any Inlet derby scheduled this year. The derby will be open to any fisherman.

Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association has ordered special club pennants, which will be sold to boat owner members for under $2 each. There will be special stars to be sewn onto the pennants for club members who win buttons for big fish. Ray Sidaway will be in charge of the project.

From the Breakwater comes complaints that ships have been dumping oil which has been washing up on the rocks, making them unpleasant to fish from, and that more than the usual amount of kelp has been making fishing difficult from the Breakwater this year.

Victoria Fish and Game Club will show three films at its general meeting at 8 p.m. Monday in the Goldstream clubhouse—one about rifle and shotgun handling and shooting by the Winchester Arms Corp., another about bird shooting in Alberta, and another about fishing in northern Canada.

Freshwater chapter of the fish and game club is in the midst of preparing a special display in the Hudson's Bay Parkade in connection with the Bay's Junior Solarium League day April 28.

Plans are to include frozen fish of the various types — steelhead, bass, rainbow, cutthroat and brown trout—and Ricky Ciccimarra has appealed for anyone who catches a prime specimen of any type within the next 10 days to get in touch with him at GR 8-4585, so he can get it frozen and preserved for the display.

North Shore Shatters United Hopes

VANCOUVER (CP) — Victoria United's chances of winning the Pacific Coast Soccer League championship suffered a severe setback Saturday when the Victoria club went down 2-1 to North Shore Carlings here.

The defeat did not alter league standings with Victoria and Vancouver Firefighters still tied for the lead with 12 points each. However, the Firefighters now have a game in hand over the island club.

The win consolidated North Shore's hold on fourth place, leaving them one point behind third-place Columbus. However, Columbus has a chance to move further ahead when it meets Vancouver Canadians here this afternoon.

	GP	W	L	T	F	A	Pts
Firefighters	7	6	1	0	17	9	12
VICTORIA	8	6	2	0	18	4	12
Columbus	7	4	2	1	13	13	9
North Shore	6	4	2	0	11	6	8
New Westminster	6	1	4	1	10	14	3
Canadians	5	1	4	0	6	6	2
St. Andrews	7	0	7	0	5	26	0

Next game: today — Columbus vs Canadians, Callister Park.

The win consolidated North Shore's hold on fourth place, leaving them one point behind third-place Columbus. However, Columbus has a chance to move further ahead when it meets Vancouver Canadians here this afternoon.

North Shore took a 1-0 half-time lead, made it 2-0 early in the second half, then packed the defence to hold off the desperate Victoria forwards.

Bobby Smith, the league's leading goal scorer, scored both North Shore goals to send his season's total to 17, three more than anyone else.

Victoria's lone goal, a great effort by centre forward Geoff Hill, came at the 15-minute mark of the second half and signalled an all-out Victoria attack for the rest of the game. But the North Shore defence, with goalie Bob Bissett outstanding, held them out.

SOFTBALL PRACTICE

Gorge, Oaks To Try Again

Gorge Hotel and Vancouver Oaks played through 30 minutes of overtime to a 2-2 draw at Royal Athletic Park yesterday, forcing a replay of their Province Cup soccer match.

Date and site of the replay will be announced later, but officials said it would probably be held in Vancouver.

Oaks, who played part of the second half and all the overtime without regular goalie Graham Frezell, had to come from behind twice to get the share in points, scoring both their goals after Frezell pulled a groin muscle and was replaced by centre-half Ron Willis.

Ian Holroyd got the first Gorge goal with five minutes gone in the second half. Steve Murray tied it up at 28 minutes, Chummy Crabbe put Gorge ahead again two minutes later, and Gary Hope got the final goal on a scramble with five minutes left.

Frezell was taken to hospital after suffering his injury, but hospital officials said he would be released later in the day.

Royal Oaks—Graham Frezell; Jim Crossley, John Cervi; Dick Thomas, Ron Willis, Jim Kelly; Steve Morley, Barry Morley, Jack Ferri, Gary Hope, Dave Patterson. Reserves—Doug Arnott, Ken Lind, Philip Sommer.

Horses Danced Joy Town to Its Doom

ROME (AP) — Archaeologists are on a long hunt for ancient Sybaris, the "joy town" that was danced to doom 2,500 years ago by its music-loving horses.

Italian scientists have been convinced for nearly two years that they have located in the heel of Italy the site of the ancient Greek colony whose riotous ways made Sybarite a synonym for voluptuous living.

Sybaris, founded by the Achaean Greeks in 720 BC, was the envy of poorer, harder working colonies. Its champions won laurels in the Olympic Games. Its banquets were sodden with fine wines, groaning with rich foods and gay with music and dancing.

They lasted until dawn and the Sybarites slept off their stupor until sunset while slaves did the work. Even so, Sybaris boasted the finest cavalry of any Greek colony. The Sybarites loved their horses so well they brought them along to the nightly revelries and taught them to dance to music.

All this was envied, especially by the neighboring rival city of Croton. So the Crotonians finally plotted to take Sybaris by surprise. The Crotonian infantry marched to the assault in the morning.

But the slaves gave the alarm and the famed Sybarite cavalry thundered out, hastily mustered, confident of beating off the attack. But Crotonian infantry ranks opened and out stepped a military band. It broke into the music to which the Sybarites had trained their horses to dance. The cavalry charge broke up in chaos as the war horses danced and pirouetted to the tune.

And so the Crotonians captured the city, enslaved the men, carried off the women and diverted the nearby Crati River from its course so its waters would cover Sybaris and hide it forever.

Spear-Fishing Fitted With New Meaning

By CAL SMITH

When I was a boy, spearfishing was a simple matter of fitting a trident spearhead to the end of a stick, standing knee deep in the cold water of an Ontario river, and thrusting blindly at sluggish shadows beneath the surface.

Perhaps this is still the practice of the Ontario redfin sucker fisherman, but spearing has taken on a new meaning in British Columbia, where even the fishing regulations describe it as the taking of fish with a spear, while using skindiving equipment.

This new complexity of method and equipment is as recent as skindiving itself and involves an exciting combination of hunting, fishing, and swimming thrills.

The early Indian spearman standing on the bank of a salmon river is a far cry from the spearfisherman of today. While the Indian waited, with a fire-hardened wooden spear, for his quarry to come into the shallow water, the modern hunter searches out his prey in water up to 90 feet deep.

And, if the approach to the hunt has changed drastically, so has the equipment. Instead of the wooden shaft with its trident spearhead, modern spears are propelled by high power guns and have effective underwater ranges up to 40 feet.

The products of more than 20 major European and American manufacturers are available to today's spearfisherman, giving him the choice of four propulsion methods including springs, rubber, compressed gas, and explosive. A choice of combinations of these is also available and one catalogue lists nearly 100 guns.

Spearheads too, are available in a wide range of types; the most popular having hold-down barbs which open on penetration. They are fastened down again to remove the fish. Tridents are seldom used unless the quarry is very small.

The most popular gun is the four-strand, rubber-powered, arbalete which gives adequate range, good penetration, and lowest cost. Whatever the gun, the diver should keep one thing in mind: If you wound anything, kill it—and if you kill anything, eat it!

'Last Words' Plucked from Obscurity

By DEL CO8 SMITH

Somehow Haydn's music for Good Friday called "The Seven Last Words of Christ" has slipped into obscurity, and you have to welcome a beautifully appreciative stereo recording by a Viennese chorus and orchestra and five solo singers, Hermann Scherchen conducting. (Westminster-17005.)

This is the oratorio version which Haydn is said to have sanctioned and which essentially follows Haydn's own orchestral score.

You will also feel indebted to Ernest Anserment and his L'Orchestre de la Suisse Romande," for a beautifully appreciative recording of characteristic works of Gabriel Faure who deserves more than he gets from his posterity if only because he maintained classic class at a critical time.

The works are the incidental music to "Pelleas et Melisande," the prelude to his opera, "Penelope" and "Masques et Bergamasques." This music is quietly restrained in its sentiment and it gets close to perfection in its form. (London-6227.)

Herbert von Karajan, conducting the Philharmonic Orchestra, has now recorded Sibelius' 5th symphony — the one which begins with a roman tic evocation of dawn, including a horn call. Karajan bears down on all its evocations of nature and man's wonderment at nature. (Angel-35922.)

Popular Records

By WILIAM D. LAFFLER

Off-Beat — "Nickel Music" (Audio Fidelity AFSD 5968) recreates the almost forgotten sound of the nickelodeon. Taken from Nickelodeons at the Gay Nineties Village in Sikeston, Mo., the numbers include "Georgia Camp Meeting" and "My Wild Irish Rose." And "The Old Calliope Man Visits a German Hofbrau" (Reprise R 6015) is a fresh departure from the standard run of records. The Sande & Greene Fun-Time Band seems to have a good time playing such beery tunes as "O Mein Papa" and "The Happy Wanderer."

For Twisters — "Twist to Songs Everybody Knows" by Chuch Marshall and the Twist-Stars (Decca DL 74267.) Apparently nothing, not even "Hawaiian War Chant" and "The Dipsy Doodle," can dodge the Twist.

LP's of the Week — Mono: "Honky-Tonk Man" by Johnny Horton (Columbia CL-1721). A selection of folksy tunes recorded by Horton before his death . . . Stereo: "25 Pianos Play Evergreens of Broadway" (Liberty LSS-14018). Tommy Garlett's 25 pianos liven up top tunes.

Milwaukee Takes Fire Out of Beer

By DON HENDERSON

MILWAUKEE (AP)—In Milwaukee, the city made famous by a beverage which also made several large families financially independent, you ask any five experts how they'd like some non-alcoholic beer.

The genuine 46-inch waistline experts have mostly one reaction. They ask you how would you like a punch in the snoot. But maybe some nice old lady in tennis shoes gives you a serious answer.

"It depends," she says, "on whether the saloon is on fire."

The feeling generally is that the market for non-alcoholic beer is just one notch ahead of the call for flat tires. Twice the demand, maybe, for burned-out light bulbs.

So what happens?

So they are starting to make a non-alcoholic beer, not exactly in Milwaukee but next door in Waukesha.

The brewery that has got into this non-alcoholic thing also has been turning out the real dynamite for 125 years. It's geared to produce 300,000 barrels of the new brew. They even expect to sell it—180,000 barrels this year, and more later.

Plainly, the sales can't be accounted for entirely by saloon fires and nice old ladies in tennis shoes.

Howard Hartman, president of Pax Head Brewing Company of Waukesha, says the demand has come from Saudi Arabia, Morocco, Libya, Bahrain, Iraq, Lebanon, Jordan, Egypt, India, Burma, Pakistan and Eritrea—places where people get at least as thirsty as they do elsewhere, but where religion or social practice forbids use of alcohol.

So far, most of the market has been developed by showing the product at international trade fairs.

The company hopes to have 50 foreign bottlers start operations within the next 12 months, along with about that many in the U.S., once the word gets around.

While the non-alcoholic product is made out of the same grain and hops as beer, is produced like beer, bottled and canned like beer, and looks, smells and — Milwaukeeans avert their eyes — tastes like beer, the absence of alcohol makes possible all sorts of shortcuts.

Near East Drinks Shortcut

One is a shortcut in the price. Without alcohol, federal taxes that make up the bulk of beer price no longer are applied.

Outside of the fact that the only way this stuff can hurt you is if you drown in it, there's one other thing going for it. There are only 67 calories in a 12-ounce can, which is about one-quarter the freight of regular beer.

And that may even bring the genuine 46-inch waistline experts to terms, eventually.

Grits to Make Results Public

Science Show Tops Century 21 Exhibits

By ALEC MERRIMAN

SEATTLE — Biggest hit of the Seattle World's Fair will be the $10,000,000 United States Science Exhibit which covers one-tenth of the exhibit space in the fairgrounds.

It can't miss. It has something for everybody and an enormous amount of interest for most people.

In a $1,000,000 domed theatre with the world's largest projection screen, visitors will be taken on an imaginary trip of more than a billion miles at thousands of times the speed of light into intergalactic space, so realistic they will have to grab on to special support bars as they imagine themselves in a space ship.

There will be a special building for children, with no parents allowed, where youngsters from eight to 13 years will perform simple experiments based on important laws of science, under supervision in their own junior science laboratory.

Just like the crazy house in a carnival midway is the science exhibit walk through a series of false perspectives and other visual illusions, touch deceptions, and tricky hearing phenomena, which prove man's senses are unreliable.

Hundreds of animals, bugs and fish will be used in animated science displays. About 9,500 fireflies will be used in a demonstration on the cause and reason for light; 33,480 chicks will be hatched before the public eye, in experiments to follow early behavior in animals; 24 pigeons will be trained to discriminate color; 286 frogs, 100 horseshoe crabs, 14 mice, four rhesus monkeys, half a dozen rare electric fish (including the elephant fish from Africa) will be used in other experiments.

Several hundred coho salmon will be conditioned to strike a target for food and differentiate color.

The U.S. Science Building, comprising six buildings and grounds including five impressive gothic columns, pools, gardens, walkways, patios and terraces covering six acres, is the first and largest exhibit based on a single theme—science—ever assembled in the world by private industry or government.

The Atomic Energy Commission of Canada at Chalk River has loaned the exhibit enough Cobalt 60 (radiation source of gamma rays) to fit into the palm of a hand, but it is protected in a lead case weighing four tons and the size of a small room.

Our guide through the science exhibit was Susan Bell, one of 40 university student science demonstrators who will act as exhibit guides, delve into electrophisiology, histology, radiobiology, microbiology and biochemistry as well as a number of other fields.

First building we entered was crowded with scaffoldings as workers and painters rushed to complete the exhibit area. It is the House of Science building and will feature a film story on seven screens, which in a fully animated sequence of cartoons show how the structure of science is built at the meeting place of the philosopher and workman.

Each building leads to another facet of science and collectively they make up the most comprehensive and complete libraries of selected quality scientific films ever assembled.

Flashiest part of the Science Exhibit will be the Spacearium, where we saw the world's largest projection screen and the world's largest and widest angle projection lens, being readied for the expected 5,000,000 people who will see the exhibit.

The screen, which is actually the whole dome of the Spacearium building, covers 8,000 square feet, twice the size of the next largest motion picture screen.

In effect viewers will be surrounded on all sides and overhead by a "window into space" through which to watch a journey at fantastic speeds.

Opening with the lift-off of a spaceship from earth, the film will take the audience past the moon, sun, mars, the asteroid ceres, through the rings of saturn and past the sun's most distant planet, pluto. In interstellar space, the cinematographic journey continues past a flare star, the huge red sun antares, the glowing hydrogen spiral of beta lyra, a double star, and the lagoon nebula to the centre of our own milky way galaxy.

At this point the film telescopes time and distance to leap into intergalactic space to give the audience views of the star cluster NGC 6539, and andromeda and other galaxies containing 100 billion stars. Looking backward the audience can also see the spiral arms and shape of our own galaxy. The awesome explosion of a supernova climaxes the intergalactic portion of the space and on the return journey the audience will be given closeup views of the planets Mercury and Venus.

* * *

It will be just like riding in a space capsule with astronaut John Glenn and viewing the scene from a space window.

The film will last about 12 minutes.

Stepping off the space platform into building 4, visitors will find an area, large enough to accommodate four jet airliners, showing methods of science and scientists at work. This is the building where animal life will be seen in action. It is crammed full of interesting displays.

The final exhibit building will provide a rest for foot-weary visitors, as they stand on a turntable and watch the summation of the exhibits flash by on the screens as the turntable revolves. Visitors will be asked to consider what they have seen and to make up their minds which direction they would like science to take in the future.

The Car Corner

Sporty Challenge Should Really Go

By J. T. JONES

Studebaker-Packard has a hot one in the works—a sports coupe evidently designed to challenge both Chevrolet's Corvette and Ford's Thunderbird.

It's called the Avanti (Italian for Forward) and it aims at Thunderbird luxury with Corvette performance. Raymond Loewry did the final styling and, as he usually does, he has turned out something different and pleasing.

It should really go, too. With a big V-8 engine, and supercharged to boot, a prototype has been clocked at 160 miles an hour, with a time of 6.7 seconds from a standing start to 60.

Fibreglas will be used for the body, a rakish windcheater with upswept tail and low snout. For the first time, a U.S. production car will protect its passengers with a roll bar over their heads. Disc brakes at the front will help the stopping.

Price is said to be in the same range as the Corvette and T-Bird.

Some oil companies are introducing sub-regular or economy grades of gasoline in parts of the U.S., although there are no present plans for a similar product in Canada.

It would be a good idea, since many imports especially are designed to run well on much lower octane fuel than our regular gasoline. Regular is good up to nearly 9/1 compression ratio, and some of the imports run ratios as low as 7/1.

B.C. Telephone Co. is about to install seat belts in all its 1,000 cars and trucks, as "the best available insurance for decreasing severity of injuries and preventing injuries when accidents occur."

It's another step forward. Many groups are opening campaigns for belts, and I hope within a few years they'll be as much accepted as brakes.

3,000 Slaves Gain Freedom

SHILLONG, India (Reuters) —The government has bargained from bondage about 3,000 slaves held by fierce tribal headmen living in the remote northeast frontier agency near the Tibetan border.

A government statement said that during the last nine months almost all the slaves held by the tribesmen had been freed.

Roblin Refuses To Step Up

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Free Press says federal authorities have unsuccessfully asked Premier Duff Roblin of Manitoba twice in the last month to resign from the provincial government and accept a cabinet portfolio.

Ships Ordered For Evacuation

MARSEILLE, France (AP) —France has ordered three ships into service for weekly voyages to Algiers, Bone and Oran to pick up people who want to come to France from Algeria. The order came as a result of Secret Army harassment of airline evacuations of Europeans.

Canada Fair Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada will consider making a fresh application for international recognition of a world's fair in this country to celebrate its centennial in 1967, Prime Minister Diefenbaker indicated yesterday.

He said he will study the situation in the light of a decision by Russia to relinquish its successful bid. Russia's world's fair application won approval of the International Exhibition Bureau last year, narrowly edging out Canada's first application.

Drawn Shade Hides Second Suicide

Hulten recalled that on March 8, 1960, as he mowed the lawn, the same shade had been drawn.

Curious, he had investigated and discovered the body of Ramaldi Calori, 72, hanging from a basement beam.

Now, two years later, the shade was drawn again.

He went to the basement and found the body of John Calori, 45, hanging from the same beam which his father had used two years ago.

The son had stood on the same kitchen chair and kicked it away as his father had.

John Birch Statement 'False One'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ralph J. Purdy, executive-manager of the Free Citizens Association formed in Saskatchewan in January, Saturday accused New Democratic leader Tommy Douglas of making false statements about the association.

"The statement of Mr. Douglas that the Free Citizens Association of Canada is similar to the John Birch Society in the U.S. is a false one," Mr. Purdy said.

He was referring to statements made by Mr. Douglas at the Canadian Labor Congress convention here this week.

Crash Kills Two in East

DAVELUYVILLE, Que. (CP) —Two persons were killed and 11 injured yesterday in a head-on collision near this village 90 miles northeast of Montreal.

Rain to Blame

Few Inspect Warship

Only 109 taxpayers and taxpayers' children turned up at HMC Dockyard yesterday to inspect a $27,000,000 piece of their own property — the destroyer-escort St. Laurent.

Rainy weather spoiled enthusiasm for the navy's first "open house" — the beginning of a summer-long program designed to acquaint people with the navy.

HMCS St. Laurent will be open to the public again between 1.30 and 4.15 p.m. today at Jetty C, HMC Dockyard—at the end of Esquimalt Road.

Bigger crowds are expected when the St. Laurent moves into Victoria's Inner Harbor next weekend.

It is not yet certain where the St. Laurent will tie up. The hope is to bring her alongside the CPR wharf.

Repatriation for 3,500

LISBON, Portugal (AP)— An official announcement says the Portuguese liners Vera Cruz, Patria and Mozambique will repatriate 3,500 Portuguese held since India seized the Goa enclaves last December. Charter planes will fly the prisoners from Bombay to Karachi, Pakistan, where they will board ships.

Telstar Role Sought

TORONTO (CP) — Eugene Haliburton, CBC vice-president in charge of programming, said Canada has asked to take part in the first live trans-Atlantic television broadcast.

He said such a broadcast, lasting 10 minutes, will be carried out in six weeks or two months, following launching of the United States satellite Telstar.

Wooden Nickels Flooding City As Funny Money Goes Wild

Victoria is full of funny money.

You can buy anything from a worthless wooden nickel to a non-negotiable dollar bill or a bronze coin which in some stores will be worth one dollar until noon Oct. 31.

The wooden nickels are put out by the Greater Victoria Association for the Retarded. They are being sold as good luck pieces which bear the wording "City of Victoria Centennial. Wooden nickel. 1862 - 1962."

The non-negotiable dollar bills bearing a picture of Mayor R. B. Wilson are being sold for one dollar each as a souvenir by the Victoria Centennial Society. Holders of some of these bills will receive $100 cash if their number is chosen.

Bronze coins, each worth $1 until noon Oct. 31, are being circulated by the Kiwanis Club of Victoria as a centennial project.

Easter Treats Join Meats In Busy Day at Food Stall

More than 500 Easter treat packages supplied by the St. Mary's Women's Guild and the Opti-Mrs. Club were given out in parcels yesterday at the Free Food Stall.

Greater Victoria's needy families screened by welfare officials received lots of meat and potatoes in the monthly food hamper, said Mrs. E. E. Harper, stall convener. There were a couple of hundred pounds of moose meat, 88 turkeys cut in half for 106 families and three tons of potatoes.

Victoria Labor Council picked up food, and two youth groups, Delta Phi and Mystics, made about 40 deliveries.

Nominations Closed March 27

Tories' Ruling Stops Gelling In Bid to Unseat McPhillips

Executive Order Not Made Public

W. C. Gelling has been informed his name will not be allowed to stand for nomination as Progressive Conservative candidate for Victoria in the forthcoming federal election.

The former chairman of Greater Victoria school board, who announced last week he would oppose Conservative MP A. deB. McPhillips for the party nomination later this month, disclosed yesterday he had been ruled out on a technicality.

LIST CLOSED

Mr. Gelling said: "It appears the list of eligible candidates and voting members was closed March 27 by executive order."

This was done, Mr. Gelling said, despite the fact that as of March 27 "no public or private notice to the members or to the public had been made to declare the date of the nominating convention or stating when the membership list would be closed."

SERVICE RULE

Mr. Gelling said in a statement issued yesterday he applied and paid for a membership in the Progressive Conservative Party here April 6. Before that time, he said, eight years of service as a school trustee ruled out political activity.

He also pointed out the party's association in Victoria federal riding had not met publicly "for the best part of a year."

FIND DIFFICULT

"I don't challenge the legality of these arrangements," Mr. Gelling said. "I find it difficult, however, to reconcile this practice with accepted democratic principles in conducting public affairs."

Mr. Gelling said he received a notice in the mail Friday that the nominating convention was to be held in the auditorium of Royal Canadian Legion, Britannia branch, April 26 at 8 p.m.

APPEARS FUTILE

"Under these circumstances," he added, "I have no alternative but to inform my supporters it appears futile for me to attend the nomination convention.

"I sincerely feel, however, that my offer of additional public service should be reviewed by a larger group of Conservatives."

REPORTS DENIED

Westwood:

Tourist Bid For Funds To Be Heard

Recreation Minister Earle Westwood last night promised a "sympathetic hearing" to the problems of the Expo-Lodging organizations in Victoria and Vancouver.

The minister said no approach had been made to his office for aid in combating possible collapse of central tourist accommodation systems through lack of staff and money.

Mr. Westwood said he understood that inquiries for accommodation were "pouring into these offices at a fantastic rate," and that provincial government action would depend on "what proposals are made" by the B.C. Chamber of Commerce.

Meanwhile, Ald. Austin Curtis said last night the provincial government and municipalities should help the Expo-Lodging tourist accommodation reservation office here.

Ald. Curtis, a member of the city finance committee which earlier rejected an appeal for municipal grants, said the situation has now changed.

Cecelia Road Tense

Old Fear Returns With Dry Weather

By TED PULFORD

The firebug who left a smoking trail of destruction through a block of homes on Cecelia Road last summer will continue to cast the long shadow of terror over the neighborhood until he is caught.

The series of nine fires—one of which culminated in slight injury to a woman — ceased abruptly when investigators from the provincial fire marshal's office moved into the area last November.

They were set between April and November.

The neighborhood was scoured, scores of people were questioned, but no arrests were made and the phantom remains at large.

People living in the fire scarred 400 block have found it impossible to return completely to the comfortable routine of their lives before the pyromaniac struck.

In most areas of the city, children and adults alike sleep oblivious to the night-noises which echo up and down the streets. But not so on Cecelia Road.

Mrs. G. C. Nielsen, 480 Cecelia, said yesterday an almost tangible tension still exists along the street.

"The children are beginning to forget the whole terrible business," she said, "but they do bring it up occasionally even now."

Fear is common in the neighborhood that the pyromaniac will return with the fiery weather of summer. His movements last year indicated a preference for warm, clear nights—preferably on a weekend or before a holiday.

People living in the neighborhood advance the possibility that the psychopath knew the neighborhood well enough to have lived there and that the pattern of fires indicated some sort of twisted grudge against one street.

Fatal Fire

Chimney Mortar Blamed

Faulty mortar in the chimney was blamed yesterday for a fire that claimed the life of a nine-months-old infant boy early Friday.

KNIFE THROUGH

View Royal fire chief Al Beasley and Colwood RCMP Cpl. Robert Rogers found a weak spot in the chimney "that you could push a knife blade through."

The fire started at 3.30 a.m. and Mr. Wertheim-Aymes managed to rescue Gilda, 9, Meta, 10, and Clary, 6, by smashing a bedroom window.

THEN SPREAD

Fire Chief Beasley said flames from the furnace apparently ate through the weak spot in the chimney and burned into the pantry wall, then spread throughout the house.

The results of the investigation will be sent to the provincial fire marshal's office in Vancouver today.

$1,200,000 Project

Anti-Sewage Pollution Voting Planned for Saanich in Fall

Some 7,000 Saanich residents may get a chance to vote this fall on a new $1,200,000 sewer project designed to remove major trouble spots of sewage pollution.

Located on the perimeter of existing sewer areas, the section under consideration is bounded roughly by Trans-Canada Highway on the south and Glanford Gardens area on the north.

It extends from Wilkinson Road on the west to the vicinity of Quadra Street on the east.

Reeve Stanley Murphy said last night if it is approved the project will provide Saanich with all the sewered lots it needs for "years to come."

A recommendation from the public works committee that detailed planning begin at once on the new sewer project will be up before council for decision Monday night.

LITTLE LARGER

It will be a little larger than the Shelbourne-Gordon Head-Cadboro Bay sewer scheme which is nearing completion, and with the exception of a few small areas will complete sewering of the urban area of the municipality.

Included in the new area are built-up sections such as Glanford Gardens where sewage pollution has proved an insoluble problem with septic tanks because of an underlying layer of clay in the ground.

If planning was started in earnest now, officials said, the project should be ready for final approval by fall. Reeve Murphy said if this was done it is likely the vote would be held as soon as possible, almost certainly before the December elections.

Fiery Threat

Roaring blaze that for time threatened block in Chinatown late yesterday afternoon destroyed interior of second floor at 1718½ Government. Both main and upper floors of old brick structure were vacant. Fireman Dan O'Connell, 910 Kingsmill, suffered cuts to hand fighting flames and was given first aid by city Const. George Burkie. Firemen said they could not estimate cause or damage until they get better look at ruins today. —(Peter Chapman photo)

Restrictions Blamed

Sooke Salmon Traps Stay Closed in 1962

The $100,000 per year salmon fish-trap operations at Sooke will not re-open this year because of federal fishing restrictions, a company spokesman said last night.

Sooke residents worked the traps from 1904, when they first became legal in British Columbia, until the closure in 1958.

The operation is owned by Sooke Harbor Fishing and Packing Co. Ltd., a subsidiary of J. H. Todd and Sons Ltd. of Vancouver.

Robert Payne, of Vancouver, general manager of the parent company, told the Colonist the Sooke company will be sold to a co-operative association of Sooke residents when restrictions are lifted.

Sooke fishermen used to work their traps five days a week, bringing in first grade spring salmon and coho.

Then there was a buildup of the B.C. fishing fleet farther up the west coast, in Port San Juan at Port Renfrew. The government "clamped down to conserve fish and squeezed the traps right out."

Knifer Still Sought

A man who Wednesday night threatened two people with a drawn knife at a Burnside Road laundromat is still being sought by Saanich police.

The man, whose identity is known to police, has been reported seen two or three times since, but had gone when officers reached the scene.

Threatened with what apparently was a hunting knife were Jack Gulliford, 409 Dunedin, and Mrs. Florence Peverett, 3161 Wascana. Neither was harmed before the man made off in a car when a move was made to telephone police.

Building Fund

City Chinese to Launch Own Drive for Hospital

Victoria's Chinese community will launch its own drive next week to raise funds for St. Joseph's Hospital building fund.

An official of the drive to raise $350,000 for the hospital expansion program said the Chinese Consolidated Benevolent Association has volunteered to conduct the canvass.

The offer was made by association president Fun Lee and Harry Lou Poy, a member of the executive.

They plan to hold a meeting Wednesday to set up canvass teams which will seek donations among the Chinese community.

Meanwhile, the general corporations division of the drive will meet Monday to report to chairman Frank Grieve on progress.

A drive official said 160 canvassers are currently covering the city business community.

Victoria Girl Dances in 'West Side Story'

Warming up near the stage door—Louise Roberts. After 13 months dancing with "West Side Story," she has come home to Canada to be married.—(Oxford Mail and Times photo.)

By TERRY FRENCH

A variation on the "Local Girl Makes Good" theme is in order when speaking about Louise Roberts.

Originally from South Africa, Louise came to Victoria six years ago with her family, so I suppose she can be classed as a local girl now. She's just returned from England, where, against terrifically keen competition, she cadged the second dancing lead and was understudy to the principal dancer in the London run of "West Side Story."

After two months at Her Majesty's Theatre in London, she toured England and Scotland with the show for 11 months.

Two amazing things about this success story are the facts that Louise was in London just seven weeks before joining the company, and, at the time, she was just 18.

Now, at the venerable age of 19, she has retired.

MARRYING SOON

At the end of this month, she will become Mrs. Graham Leslie, and will go off to live happily in a houseboat in the heart of Vancouver.

Right now she's spending some time with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Brian Roberts, Lockehaven Drive, and is caught up with wedding plans, but in the midst of the excitement, she's delighted to tell of her year with the show.

SAMMY DAVIS JR.

The backstage life, the thrill of meeting famous entertainers and the sheer joy of dancing are all entangled in her show memories, and perhaps one of the most exciting occasions she and a couple of other dancers remember is an evening spent with Sammy Davis Jr. and his wife May Britt, in London.

"I think he must be one of the most wonderful entertainers in the world."

As she and the two other girls peeped out from backstage, watching his show from the wings, he spied them and recognized them as dancers from "West Side Story" and immediately switched his routine, doing something from that show. The girls were delighted, and after the show he invited them to come drink champagne with him and his wife. The girls were reluctant to go because they were dressed in after-rehearsal garb, slacks, but he insisted, and when they arrived, they found that May Britt, to make them fell entirely comfortable, had also changed into slacks.

"They were so kind to us, and treated us almost as contemporaries, and we were just wide-eyed kids," Louise recounts.

As to the show itself, she couldn't be more enthusiastic. She was working with such people as George Chakiris (Academy Award winner); David Holliday (now in Noel Coward's new show, Sail Away in London); and Jill Martin (of My Fair Lady fame).

Her excitement about the show was well founded, as we know, for the Bernstein music and Jerome Robbins choreography took New York by storm when West Side Story first opened, and the movie is adding to wonderful reputation. A typical reaction in England was printed in a Bristol paper:

"Every movement, every step is full of meaning and invention. The choreography has the kind of vigor and virility that makes much of the stage dancing of which we are familiar look like a slightly advanced form of hop scotch."

TOUGH LIFE

One would think that having tasted the life, done well and enjoyed it so, that Louise would be determined to carry on in musicals, but she says "It's a tough life. I had a wonderful time, have got it out of my system, and am ready to settle down."

So, Louise Roberts, at age 19 has, for the time being anyway, retired.

What do girls do when they get together? Talk and giggle, of course, and this group is no exception. Louise Roberts, standing at back relaxes in the dressing room with other dancers and singers from the show.

Garnishes Galore

Gay garnishes add life and zest to fish dishes in the same way that smart looking accessories dress up a wardrobe. To give a finishing touch to a seafood creation, consider one or more of these possibilities:

—Sprigs of fresh parsley, watercress, mint or dill.

—Lemon or lime slices, wedges, or twists.

—Slices of tomato, cucumber, or hard-cooked egg.

—Sauteed thin orange slices, sauteed canned pineapple rings.

—Sticks or curls of carrot or celery, radish roses.

—Rings of thinly sliced onion or green pepper.

—A sprinkling of paprika, chopped chives, or minced parsley.

—Golden brown croutons.

Queen Likes Feather

BADMINTON, England (CP)—Queen Elizabeth defied the fashion experts again Saturday and appeared in public with a feather in her hat.

London fashion houses hate feathers, but the Queen doesn't seem to care.

She showed up at the elite Badminton Horse Trials, sporting the tight-fitting feathered hat and a smart new hair style beneath it.

The royal hair arrangement is faintly evocative of the bouffant style favored by Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy, who lunched with the Queen at Buckingham Palace a few weeks ago.

Fashion houses also dislike long skirts — the pleated type that extend several inches below the knee—but the Queen has been ignoring that ruling as well.

She and her sister, Princess Margaret, have worn long skirts during the past couple of days at Badminton. Some fashion writers have said their skirts look like a throwback to wartime years.

Musical Art Society Centennial Project

The centennial project of the Victoria Musical Art Society will be the presentation of Gianni Schicchi, a comic opera by Puccini.

It will open on May 2 at 8.30 p.m. in the auditorium of the Oak Bay Junior High School and will continue until Saturday, May 5.

An extra feature will be a Mozart concerto by Frank Slater, clarinet soloist. As the opera takes only about an hour, the clarinet solo will open the program.

Capt. James Gayfer, musical director, has arranged for an 18-piece orchestra drawn from members of the Victoria Symphony Orchestra and from the HMCS Naden band.

Many Silhouettes For Spring 1962

This summer, women can switch their images as easily as they change gramophone records. For Life No. 1, there are casual fashions in down-to-earth fabrics like jersey, Acrilan and mercerized cotton. Mood: emancipated woman.

For Life No. 2, there are floataway dresses in georgette and chiffon and nylon organza. Mood: the fragile female.

But, as I found at the London Showrooms of Susan Small, women can't help looking feminine this summer, however casually they try to dress. The frills are even creeping among the fishermen's knits! Which means that . . .

. . . tailored Terylene-serge suits have broderie blouses or silky cascades of peeping-out frills.

. . . Acrilan check two-pieces have neat-as-a-pin white Tricel blouses and wasp-waisted belts to give "Edwardian waists."

As for Life No. 2's clothes, they're more feminine than they've been since the '30s.

FOR FLUID FIGURES:

The latest short evening dresses will rescue lots of women from embarrassment, I predict, after seeing the new Collections at Susan Small.

"Choosing between a spangled crinoline and a tight-fitting sheath was a dilemma for some women," recalls their designer. "They felt like fairy dolls in one and like Dachshund dogs in the other. But the new flimsy flaring dresses have a knack of floating over the figure to make its outlines softer."

This is a trick that improves the thin or the stout—and the fluidity of the fabric actually lends the wearer a flowing movement too.

How to spot the new style? Look for georgette: Look for a long loose body-following bodice; watch for diagonally-hung frills in two tiers in the skirt, flaring out to a wide hemline. Susan Small has them from about 13½ gns. retail.

Flower-Shaped Skirts Are A Cast-Iron Cert: Waists have been on the move for years, sleeves come and go with the seasons, frills are there or not — it's optional — but one fashion feature is a cast-iron cert this summer. The wide-at-the hemline skirt.

"Skirts," says Susan Small, "flare out like Canterbury bells, daffodil trumpets, poppy petals, bluebells, or tulips." As some skirts suit some figures better than others, here's a lighthearted flowery guide to finding the fashion for you.

The Canterbury Bell blossoms out from inlet gores. Both its outline and hemline are wavy, creating curves that prettify tall thin people. To flatter the hips, though, spare the gores—they can be broadening if you're big-boned.

The Daffodil Trumpet has a long slow curve which stretches out a short figure so that the distance from diaphragm to knees looks longer than usual.

The Poppy Petal is softly flared and a stiff petti would poison its airy-fairy flavor. Here's a skirt for the hippy, for it places flat-lying folds over the bonework—these are soft but not bunchy.

Coincidence on Waikiki

By DOROTHY WROTNOWSKI

A coincidence is always a little amazing but a double one is downright exciting.

This happened the other day on Waikiki Beach. Eileen Lesroyd of the Colonist editorial staff, her two daughters, Erica and Grania and myself flew down to the famous resort on holiday and arrived sometime in the middle of the night.

Next day, not too bright and early, we made for the beach. Before we had a chance to pick a spot to spread our mats, a familiar voice said "I just remarked to my wife that you looked like Mrs. Wrotnowski when suddenly I realized it was you." The speaker was Cyril Chapman, manager of the Empress Hotel.

We all felt that among the hundreds of people along that stretch of beach it was a bit of a coincidence that we should walk down right to them.

That was Saturday. The next day we hired a U-drive and after a swim in the surf at Hanauma Bay went onto Koko Head, the blow hole, the Pali and a visit to a Buddhist temple enroute back.

We were being real tourists all the way, clad in one or another version of the colorful muumuus, pineapple leaf hats and carrying the inevitable cameras.

Just lazing is a must on a Hawaiian holiday and we didn't find it at all difficult to stay all day Monday on the beach drinking in the sunshine and headily perfumed air.

In the evening we went sightseeing again. Stopping in the International Market to watch the show we edged our way into the crowd for a vantage point.

Cyril Chapman, of course.

We went back to the Chapman's cottage on the beach not only to hear the lulling sound of the surf on the moonlit sands, but to hear a recording that David Chapman had made of his father's talk on the radio earlier that day.

Moxie Whitney, formerly of the Royal York and Banff Hotel orchestras, is playing at the Royal Hawaiian this year. And he conducts a Canadian program from Radio Station Hi Kei during which time he puts on a well known Canadian on holiday in the islands.

After hearing Mr. Chapman's talk boosting Victoria he recalled that Eileen had been top woman Commonwealth shot at Bisley. With the thought he was up and on the phone to Moxie. Yes, of course he was interested and would Eileen be down at the station at 12.15 p.m. on Tuesday?

Would she? Why not? Certainly she would.

After answering questions about her shooting, Eileen did her share about plugging our own garden city.

And if the people who were listening to those programs don't know anything else about Victoria, they do know there is a hotel called the Empress and a newspaper named The Daily Colonist.

St. Mary's

Imported French Lace Chosen by Janis Corry

Guest pews were marked with white roses and lily of the valley in St. Mary's Anglican Church yesterday for the marriage of Janis Jamieson Corry to Mr. John Allen Spriggs.

Canon Hywel J. Jones officiated at the ceremony for the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack R. Corry, Arundel Drive, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Spriggs, Island Road.

Miss Corry chose a floor-length gown of delicate imported French lace. The basque bodice with lily-point sleeves had a scalloped neckline and the full hooped skirt with chapel train billowed from a dropped waistline. Her veil misted from a crown of sequins. She married pink rapture roses.

Matron-of-honor, Mrs. J. Sommerville, bridesmaids Miss Suzanne McElmoyle and Miss Sharron Holdridge were gowned alike in copen blue crystalette dresses fashioned with scooped neckline, dropped waists and bouffant skirts. They wore floral tiaras of white carnations and ice blue leaves and carried white carnations and white hyacinths in Hogarth style.

Mr. Corry gave his daughter in marriage.

Brother of the groom, Mr. Gordon Spriggs was best man and ushers were Mr. Peter Corry and Mr. John Sommerville.

For a honeymoon in the south, the new Mrs. Spriggs changed into a powder blue wool suit with matching paisley shoes and bag and wore a cymbidium orchid.

Hear Vows

Several guests came from Vancouver to attend the wedding of Miss Eileen Whiting and Mr. Richard Mills in St. Patrick's Church, Oak Bay. They were Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Gibbs, Mrs. Ruth Tullock and Mrs. Ruby Whiting.

A Golden Anniversary

A happy event on April 12 was the golden wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Maslen, 1034 Southgate Street of Victoria who were married in Bristol, England, in 1912. After their marriage, they left for Canada, making their home in Saskatoon where they resided until 1947 when they moved to Victoria. They have one son, Stanley, of Edmonton, who was with them for the occasion and one daughter, Mrs. Ken Wilson (Betty) of Halifax, and eight grandchildren. Congratulations and best wishes were received from friends and relatives in Canada, the United States and England.

First Mayor's Granddaughter Donates Gown to the Archives

By JAMES K. NESBITT

An elegant gown of Bergundy-colored velvet and satin, worn by the wife of Thomas Harris, first mayor of Victoria in 1862, has been sent to the provincial Archives, by a Harris granddaughter, Mrs. G. W. Melhuish of Vancouver.

It could have been the gown Mrs. Harris had fashioned for the luncheon she and His Worship gave in their fine red-brick home on Government Street for Jane, Lady Franklin, widow of the great Arctic explorer, Sir John Franklin.

The ladies in the Archives tell me the gown was the very latest in fashion of the time. It has a slight, lace-fringed train, ruffles, galore and a cord hanging down the front from the waist. The ensemble includes a bergundy-tone bay of velvet. In splendid condition after a century, the gown is low necked, narrow waisted, and well padded, for there was no central heat in those days, and wise ladies took precautions, for pneumonia was the enemy of all.

Mrs. Thomas Harris, wife of the first mayor of Victoria, is pictured here but she is not wearing the dress that has recently been donated to the B.C. Archives by her granddaughter. Though she is wearing a floral cap on her hair and undoubtedly at the end of the long chain around her neck is a picture of her husband.

Lieut. Philip Hankin was Lady Franklin's ADC at the Harris luncheon and he wrote years later that he had told her "Mrs. Harris will herself open the front door, and she will wear a low-necked dress with a large locket containing a picture of Mr. Harris round her neck. (I believe they were the fashion in those days.) She will also wear a beautiful white cap with bright red ribbon and a red rose on each side of her cap." Lieut. Hankin wrote of that social event: "We had a very good luncheon, or dinner I ought to call it, cooked by their Chinese cook, and plenty of good champagne, and afterwards a very nice dessert was put on the table with decanters of port and sherry."

Five grandchildren of Mayor and Mrs. Harris are registered for Pioneers' centennial events next month — Mrs. Melhuish, Mrs. C. P. Schwengers, both of Vancouver; H. P. W. Wilson, Victoria, Clifford Wilson, in England, and Lambourn Wilson of Kelowna.

They are the daughters and sons of the first mayor's daughter, Emily, and William Wilson, who were the first couple married, in 1872, in the first Christ Church Cathedral, which stood on the site where the new Law Courts building is today.

Your Problems

By Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: Our 12-year-old daughter is going to be in a piano recital soon. When she asked her father to attend the recital he said, "I've heard you play that piece dozens of times. Why should I go over to the hall and get stuck listening to all those other kids?"

Kathy felt hurt. She tried to hide her feelings but I know she was battling to keep back the tears. I am writing to ask if I should say nothing and let the clod stay home? Or should I make an issue of it and insist that he go with me? I know it will mean an argument but I'm willing to fight it out if you feel it's important. I'm sure I can get him to go if I put on the pressure.

Please say yes or no and state your reasons.—MRS. C. W.

Dear Mrs. C. W.: By all means put on the pressure.

It gives a child a warm feeling of security to know that both parents are interested in his achievements. A father's physical presence demonstrates that he is interested.

If all parents felt as your husband does there would be no audience.

Dear Ann Landers: We've never had a neighbor problem but we have one now. Can you suggest something to make life liveable?

The couple next door have no children. They are sourpusses and even a "good-morning" is a great effort for them. Our three young sons are active and high-spirited. But they are not destructive, and they have been taught to respect older people and stay off their property.

The neighbors left a note on our porch last fall. It was attached to our sons' baseball. The note read: "Everything that goes over the fence and lands on our property from now on is ours."

In the last several months the boys have lost two balls, a hoola hoop, a yo-yo and a kite. Shall we let this situation coast along and say nothing? Your advice is needed. —PEACE-LOVERS.

DEAR LOVERS: Letting the situation coast along is no solution. As summer approaches things will get worse, not better.

Invite the neighbors in for a cup of coffee—and a talk. Perhaps your children are more active and high-spirited than you realize. They may have done some things you aren't aware of.

If the neighbors refuse your invitation, warn the boys to be especially careful about keeping their belongings and themselves off the neighbors' property.

Sidney Rotary Club Sponsors Ballet Film

Sidney Rotary Club Theatre Night has grown this year. They will sponsor three theatre nights at the Gem Theatre in Sidney on April 30, May 1 and 2.

And the reason for the three night showing is because of the special film, "The Bolshoi Ballet."

The ballerina of the show is Galina Ulanova and supporting stars are Raissa Struchkova, Nikolai Fadeyechev and the Bolshoi Theatre Ballet.

Included in the program are such famous numbers as the Dance of the Tartars from the Fountain of Bakhchasaral; Spanish Dance from Le Lac des Cygnes; Spring Water and the Polonaise and Cracovienne from Ivan Susanin and Walpurgisnacht from "Faust."

Giselle, ballet in two acts, and The Dying Swan are the highlights of the show.

Sidney Rotary Club will use the proceeds entirely for community service. In the past they have supported the Saanichton Agricultural Fair, 4-H Club, provided scholarships and purchased expensive equipment for Rest Haven Hospital.

Claude Johnson, Rotary president; Harold Dawson, vice-president; Doug Frizzell, community service chairman; Tom Flint, service chairman, and Jim Wakefield, attendance chairman, are the committee in charge of arrangements.

Dinner Party

Mrs. Jim Miller entertained at a dinner party and shower Friday evening at the Denison Road home of her aunt, Mrs. J. A. Young, in honor of April bride-elect, Miss Susan Edgell, who will be married at the end of the month to Lieut. John Ryley. Twenty guests attended the affair.

Garden Notes

Never Comes Back

By M. V. CHESNUT, PEBS

GREEN BLUE SPRUCE—(R. W., Victoria). I'm afraid the spray you used on your Koister blue spruce has removed the blue coloring from the needles permanently. The color is all in a waxy coating on the needles. Certain sprays will dissolve this wax, and once gone, it never comes back to those particular needles.

As your tree makes fresh growth, though, the new needles will have their normal blue coloring, and eventually these will hide the inner green portions. It is always best with the blue evergreens to test any particular spray on a small and inconspicious part of the tree before undertaking any full-scale spraying.

DROUGHT RESISTANT PLANTS—(M. E. S., Victoria). There are no plants which can get along without any water at all, but some which are fairly resistant to droughty conditions are California poppies, Portulaca, nasturtium, cleome, snow-in-summer, catmint, sedum and lavender cotton. The Glorioss daisy can get along with very little artificial watering in its second year and thereafter, and I still have a few packets of these seeds for anyone who missed out on our earlier free seed offer.

You may use the water from your washing machine freely on your plants as long as you use real soap in it. Detergent water isn't good for plants and, while it is sometimes necessary to use it rather than see your plants die of drought, try to dilute it as much as possible and spread it around widely rather than allowing a concentration of detergent build up in the soil at any one spot in the garden.

RUBBER PLANT—(D. S., Victoria). Your rubber plant—actually a member of the fig family—likes ordinary room temperatures around 65 degrees, with lots of light but not very much direct sunshine, and appreciates having its leaves washed with plain water as often as you can manage.

Watering is a bit of a problem with this plant, as the lower leaves dry up and fall off it too much or too little water is given. Try to maintain the soil just barely moist, never bone dry nor soggy wet, and especially avoid stagnant sogginess in the bottom of the pot. Never leave water in the saucer.

Another problem with the rubber plant is its tendency to grow too big for the room. It is best to start a new plant every few years by air-layering the top or you can cut off the tip of the plant when between two and three feet tall to make it branch out.

CALIFORNIA TREE POPPY—(E. P., Victoria). The correct pruning for romneya coulteri is to cut away all dead wood in early April. In years of severe frost, this will often mean that the whole of the topgrowth comes off, cutting the plant right down to the ground but, as the plant produces its blossoms on new wood anyway, no harm is done. New shoots are produced freely from the roots or from the bases of the woody stems and will provide masses of bloom.

HOLLOW THRIFT—(H. M. W., Sidney). The death of the middle portions in your clumps of thrift are more likely due to old age and exhaustion. As the clump spreads outward, the vigorous new young shoots on the outer portion take all the good from the soil, leaving little or nothing for the hard and woody middle portion. This happens quite often with clumps of perennial pinks, too.

Such plants should be taken up every second year and divided, replanting only the outer pieces and discarding the worn-out middle.

Burton's Price Warms Up

HOLLYWOOD—Richard Burton's picture price has zoomed skyward. The current publicity has given him the one thing he lacked on the screen—sex appeal. He has always been a good actor, but the image that emanated from stage and screen was on the cold side. Not any more.

Stephen Boyd is flashing signals in Hope Lange's direction. Steve was the original Antony to Elizabeth Taylor's Cleopatra. What an escape! Mama Jolie Gabor has hired herself a press agent to push her forthcoming memoirs. If Mama would tell all, she'd have a best seller. But will she?

Anna Maria Alberghetti and producer David Merrick are so palsy walsy that David will give the little girl a huge supper party after she opens in Carnival the night of June 11 in Los Angeles.

Director Gower Champion wants to have absolute say-so over June Havoc's Marathon musical. And he won't sign to direct unless he also gets producing rights from David Merrick.

Roddy McDowall will make all his prize film, Catcher in the Rye, in New York—for his own company, Six East Productions—with producer Ely Landeau providing the cash. The Six East is taken from Roddy's lawyer's office-building number.

Madame Nijinsky, widow of the famed Russian dancer, is said to be fighting against making the movie biography of her husband. Horst Buchholz was set for the role and, while he resembles Nijinsky, I don't believe he can dance at all. How were they planning to do it, with mirrors?

Kiss of Death Is Profitable

By PETER S. BOOG

RANGOON, Burma (AP)—That business of kissing a cobra can be fatal, but there seem to be more snake charmers working in Burma than ever before. The profits are good.

By some estimates about a third of the men following this perilous profession wind up poisoned—and dead.

The snake charmers come from sacred Mount Popa, which rises 4,000 feet above the flat dry basin of Central Burma. This is the breeding ground of the famous Hamadryad, better known as the king cobra.

When disturbed, it coils up, raises its head five feet off the ground—and then is ready to strike. Its neck, marked by a big V, expands into a sort of hood when angered, and it lashes out with lightning speed.

The object of snake charming, as practised in Burma, is to hypnotize the cobra, then kiss it on the mouth.

It is said cobras lose their venom for 90 days following the monsoon season late in the year. At that time the snake charmers bag the biggest males and take them down to the lowlands—securely confined in big bamboo baskets.

The performance begins when the charmer, to pipe music, dances around the basket. Then, suddenly, he flips the lid off the basket—and the cobra shoots up, its eyes angry, hood extended and forked tongue darting in and out.

The reptile follows the dancer's movements, swaying to the music but never exposing its back to the charmer. Closer and closer dances the charmer—then, like a flash, the snake strikes.

The charmer sidesteps nimbly and, using two fingers, seizes the snake under its hood.

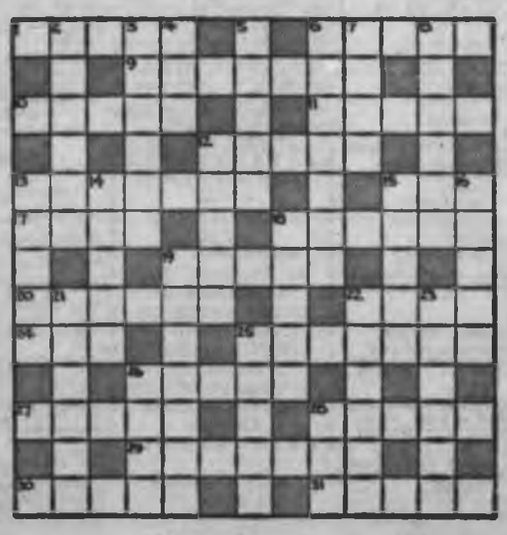

Again and again the snake strikes, but each time the charmer catches it under the hood. After a time, the snake apparently loses its will and tries to slither off in the other direction.

The charmer then catches it and wraps it around his neck. He next goes to the second basket, and then on to the third.

It is usually at the third basket, with two cobras already entwined around his neck, that the charmer brings the performance to its climax with the sometimes deadly kiss.

At this point the spectators usually shower the charmer with coins. A charmer can make enough money during the three-month period to see him through the entire year.

Answer in Tuesday's Colonist

LET'S TALK

By Rudolf Flesch

Jewish people are not noted for their military genius, but that's probably just a historical accident. If circumstances are right, Jews produce their great war heroes just like anyone else.

I'd never heard of General Sir John Monash until I read a piece about him in "England Half English" by Colin McInnes (Random House). He was a most extraordinary man.

Monash was born in Melbourne, Australia, in 1865. He went to college and then to the University of Melbourne, where he graduated in engineering, law and arts—all three—while studying, in his spare time, medicine, history and archaeology. He was a competent artist and musician and fluent in French and German. He became a civil engineer.

Job Lasted Month

His chief outside interest was in the Australian Citizen Forces. He was commissioned a lieutenant at 22 and by the time he was 48, in 1913, he was a colonel.

When the First World War broke out, he was made chief censor of the Commonwealth, but stayed in that job only one month. He was then appointed commander of the 4th Infantry Brigade, which took part in the famous battle of Gallipoli.

After Gallipoli Monash was transferred to France, where his genius for organization began to be recognized. He forged a co-ordinated weapon out of infantry, tanks, artillery and planes. By early 1916, he was major-general in command of the 3rd Australian Division; by May 1918, he was lieutenant-general commanding the whole Australian Army Corps. At the end of the war, he was in command of eight divisions.

First Citizen

After the war he returned to Australia and went back to engineering and private life. He remained, however, the undisputed first citizen of his nation, the man who had led it to victory in the First World War.

When he died in 1931, 200,000 Australians followed his coffin.

Monash never tried to hide the fact that he was a Jew; and by his sheer presence and prestige he made anti-Semitism impossible in Australia as long as he lived. To this day Australians speak of him with reverence.

He hated war all his life. After the First World War he said: "I deplored all the time the loss of precious life and the waste of human effort. Nothing could have been more repugnant to me than the realization of the dreadful inefficiency and the misspent energy of war."

Winning Contract

By HOWARD SCHENKEN and RICHARD L. FREY

Bridge Quiz:

When partner has passed your opening one bid, you must alter the usual valuation of your hand. His pass declares that he has fewer than six points in high cards; fewer than seven including distribution in support of your opening bid. Opponents' action and the vulnerability are your further guides to the question of whether to rebid and, if so, what.

Neither vulnerable, the bidding begins:

South	West	North	East
1♠	Pass	Pass	1 N.T.

What should South bid with each of the following hands?

(a) ♠ K 10 8 7 6 2 ♡ A Q J 9 8 4 ◇ A ♣ --	(d) ♠ K 10 9 5 2 ♡ A K Q J 4 ◇ A ♣ K 3
(b) ♠ 10 9 8 7 2 ♡ A Q J 8 4 ◇ A K ♣ 7	(e) ♠ A 9 8 7 2 ♡ Q J 10 9 7 ◇ A Q 4 ♣ --
(c) ♠ K 10 9 5 ♡ A K Q 9 8 ◇ 9 2 ♣ 8 3	(f) ♠ A K Q 9 8 ♡ K J 6 5 4 ◇ A 2 ♣ 8

Answers to Bridge Quiz:

a. Three hearts. Part of partner's reason for passing may be shortage of spades. You need little more than heart length to make game. Your bid should warn him against a minor suit foray, while encouraging him if it finds a heart fit.

b. Two hearts. Your hand would be worth a stronger rebid if partner had responded with, let us say, one no trump. But he may have a total bust.

c. Pass . . . and hope that if the opponents get to game in no trump, your heart suit will run.

d. Double. In view of partner's previous pass, this must be a penalty double. If West bids a minor, he may land right in partner's camp.

e. Two hearts. Your suit is good enough to make a penalty double unlikely; your hand is good enough to hope for game with no more than a distributional fit.

f. Pass. You have been warned that spades are breaking badly. If hearts are stacked behind you, as is very likely, you may suffer a severe penalty at any spot you wind up.

Bill of Rights 'Book' Ottawa Best Seller

OTTAWA (CP)—The Bill of Rights is a big boon to the federal treasury, the Commons was told yesterday.

"It's a best-seller," Finance Minister Fleming said.

It costs 30 cents to produce and is selling for $1. Of 20,000 copies printed, 14,500 had been sold and more orders were coming in.

Mr. Fleming was replying to a charge Thursday night by John R. Matheson (L—Leeds) that distribution of the Bill of Rights in the form of a large illuminated document with gold scrollwork, fancy print and Prime Minister Diefenbaker's signature was "misuse of public funds."

Mr. Matheson said it should be "put down as part of a Progressive Conservative expense account."

Pilgrims Plan Long Walk With Cross

NANAIMO—A pilgrimage to carry the Holy Cross between Nanaimo and Victoria will begin here at 2 p.m. Wednesday.

Bold Island Art In Seattle Booth

By JUNE LEAHY

The painting is a vivid totem the original of which was carved exactly 100 years ago at Fort Rupert and which will be part of Victoria's centennial theme.

Jean Lytton turns out water colors with the depth and texture usually associated with oil paintings. Her intrigue with British Columbia's Indian lore has led her to work exclusively in this medium.

An added tourist attraction here this summer will be five other paintings in the Nanaimo tourist bureau. She will display 25 more pictures in a private gallery in Victoria.

Clung to Boat For Two Weeks

RANGOON, Burma (AP)—Nineteen survivors—including a woman and a 12-year-old boy—of a shipwreck in the Indian Ocean have arrived here after clinging to an overturned boat for two weeks.

Five of the party died as a result of the ordeal. The survivors were all natives of the Indian-administered Nicobar Islands north of Sumatra.

Art Scholarship

City Girl Chosen

Marilyn Strouts, 18, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Strouts, 928 Foul Bay, yesterday was advised she has won a $125 MacMillan scholarship, awarded by the British Columbia Art Teachers' Association.

Miss Strouts, now in Grade 12 at Victoria High, will attend Vancouver Art School next year.

Daff Crop Biggest

Six million daffodils started flying east from Vancouver Island yesterday aboard regular airline flights and at least six special planes.

The crop is the biggest ever for southern Vancouver Island, in the opinion of most growers.

From now through Thursday about 500,000 dozen of the spring blooms will be flying to markets as far away as Newfoundland.

Of the 6,000,000 blooms, Geoffrey Vantreight, 6437 Tyndall, one of the principal growers, says 90 per cent are the popular big King Alfred daffodils.

Nina Back in City to Ponder Uncertain Future in Pageant

Miss Canada came home to Victoria yesterday to rest and ponder a future made uncertain by disorganization and strife in the Miss Canada Pageant.

Nina Holden, speaking from her home at 465 Foster, said the newly-organized pageant company had sent her home for a two-month holiday with pay while the reorganization proceeds.

"At the end of June," she said, "I'll go back and see what they have to offer. If everything is satisfactory, I'll continue to hold the title. If not, I'll resign."

The pagent's next move was uncertain, Miss Holden said, "but I believe they intend to put on a package tour across the country."

Chinchilla Loss $15,000

LADYSMITH—Loss has been set at about $15,000 after 150 chinchillas died early Saturday in a fire which destroyed their shed-home on the breeding farm of Mrs. Tom Campbell on Symonds Street, between Fourth and Fifth Avenues. Volunteer fire department led by chief J. K. Lumsden answered the alarm.

Alberni, Courtenay

Voters Approve Sewers, Schools

By MARGARET TREBETT AND TED GASKELL

Third time proved lucky yesterday for Alberni's controversial $600,000 sewer bylaw, while Courtenay voters gave quick approval to a $930,000 schools building plan.

The sewer bylaw, rejected twice before and as recently as last December, won a 72 per cent majority with 826 in favor, 316 against and 30 ballots spoiled.

The school construction scheme, providing new classrooms and activity rooms over the next three or four years won by 76 per cent with 1,211 in favor, 382 against and 16 ballots spoiled.

HOPE FOR MARCH

More than 61 per cent of Alberni's voters went to the polls and pleased civic officials said they hoped to complete the sewer system by the end of March.

If they do so, they will be eligible for a $17,000 rebate on a Central Mortgage loan. The city also plans to take advantage of federal grants by doing most of the work next winter.

The bylaw covers all of Alberni except a sparsely-populated area along River Road. It was opposed by former mayor Mabel Anderson, defeated last December in her bid for re-election.

In Courtenay, about 31 per cent of the eligible local voters cast ballots and only two areas, Tsolum and Union Bay, fell short of the needed margin.

School board chairman James Simon said the first project, addition of two rooms at a Comox school, will be completed by September. An activity room at Arden school also will be built this summer.

Other items are a three-room elementary school in Courtenay, a four-room elementary structure in Comox, a new junior secondary school in Cumberland, major additions to Courtenay junior secondary school and new rooms for other schools.

'Million-to-One' Event

Triplets Born 13 Days Apart

FORT FRANCES, Ont. (CP)—Triplets are thriving in this northwest Ontario town after having been born 13 days apart in a medical rarity.

A boy and a girl were born by caesarean section to Mrs. Clarence Bujold Friday—13 days after the first of the triplets, a boy, had been born at La Verendry Hospital here.

Mrs. Bujold entered the hospital a month before the first baby arrived, and remained in hospital under close surveillance.

The first boy, born April 1, weighed four pounds, 14 ounces. The girl, born first on Friday, weighed six pounds, followed by her younger brother who weighed five pounds, 10 ounces.

Dr. W. G. Boyle, the attending physician and a practitioner in Fort Frances since 1937, said in an interview: "We had lots of time to prepare, as an X-ray was taken two months before the first baby arrived."

The physician said the triplets were expected to arrive April 13, "and the first baby could be called premature, although this was not indicated by its weight."

All three babies were "remarkably husky."

Dr. Boyle did not comment on the lengthy delay between the births, beyond saying that the first baby "arrived naturally, then complications developed and the caesarean operation was later performed."

"It's a one-in-a-million chance," he said. He could not recall a similar case in Canada.

Chiefs Form Crime Link

VANCOUVER (CP)—A new, interprovincial police chiefs information system has been set up in Western Canada to keep abreast of organized crime.

The decision to exchange information about crime and criminals on an informal basis was taken during the weekend at the conclusion of the fifth annual conference of Western Canada police chiefs.

No Threat Yet

West Vancouver chief Moir MacBrayne said the new system will enable municipal police departments to keep in touch with crime in other centres.

He did not think western Canada was as yet faced with any threat from syndicated crime, although there was a definite connection between the drug rackets in Vancouver and Ontario.

Chiefs Advised

He said the chiefs have been advised of the movement of rackets in the United States but so far as is known they have not yet moved into Canada.

U.S. May Scrap First-Strike Nuclear Arms

WALT ROSTOW
. . . new strategy

CHICAGO (AP)—The Sunday Times said Saturday the State Department and Pentagon are studying a strategic plan under which the United States would renounce striking a first nuclear blow except in retaliation for a massive conventional attack.

The newspaper said in a Washington dispatch that the plan is incorporated in a 285-page document prepared by Walt W. Rostow, former White House defence adviser who now heads the State Department's planning staff.

OFFICIAL POLICY

It added that the plan is being reviewed for possible adoption by the National Security Council as the official defence policy of the United States.

The article, by Thomas B. Ross, said: "Rostow's plan recommends a revamping of the nation's arsenal to eliminate first-strike weapons — bombers and missiles that are vulnerable to sneak attack and, therefore, reliable only for striking the first atomic blow.

'DON'T RESTRICT HIM'

"At the same time, the plan cautions that the nation may not be properly armed for a pure second-strike strategy for many years and President Kennedy should not now be restricted in striking first if necessary.

REJECTED

"However, the Rostow plan flatly rejects the concept of preemptive attack—hitting an enemy first on intelligence reports that he is about to hit you.

"The United States should strike a first atomic blow, Rostow argues, only in retaliation for a massive conventional assault, say a big push by the Red army that threatened to engulf Western Europe."

Angry Whites Protest Death Decree

ALGIERS (AP)—Algeria's Europeans rolled down their shop fronts and walked off their jobs Saturday in a protest strike against the death penalty handed ex-general Edmond Jouhaud, a leader of the terrorist Secret Army Organization.

Jouhaud himself sat in his cell in Sante Prison in Paris. Despite his refusal to ask President Charles de Gaulle for mercy, his lawyers were going ahead with a clemency appeal.

In both Algiers and Oran the death penalty angered the European populations opposed to Algeria's independence. Businesses closed, most of the gas and electricity services went off, schools shut down, buses stopped running, and postal and telephone service was hampered.

In Algiers, the secret army kept up its campaign of terror against French authority and the Moslems.

Adenauer Upset By Berlin Plan

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP)—German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer was reported Saturday to have objected strenuously to new United States proposals for Berlin, which in his view would move toward recognition of Communist East Germany.

Two days before the start of a new round of U.S.-Soviet talks on a possible Berlin settlement, crucial tensions appeared to be building up between Washington and Bonn.

LACK OF CONFIDENCE

Press reports from Bonn indicated sharp displeasure with the trend of U.S. thinking and a lack of confidence in where the Kennedy administration would draw the line on accommodations of Western policy with Soviet policy in its attempts to reach a settlement.

Informants here said Adenauer had made his objection known in unmistakable terms. Diplomats said he seemed to be annoyed and upset by indications he saw in the U.S. negotiating plan that the Kennedy administration is willing to move toward at least a limited, practical recognition of East Germany.

TO MEET MONDAY

Four main proposals were set forth in the U.S. working paper submitted to Allied governments for comment and Rusk hoped—approval.

FREEZE BORDERS

Adenauer is said to have objected, among other things, to a provision for freezing the present demarcation lines which divide East Germany and Poland, and East and West Germany, on the ground that this would give new prestige and respect to Communist East Germany.

Apparently Adenauer objected also to modification of a U.S. proposal for an international authority to operate the Berlin supply lines. Under this proposition as it now stands the East Germans apparently would have an important role to play, giving them a basis for claiming defacto recognition by the Western powers.

Cuban refugees greet wounded prisoner

Prisoners Return To Cheers, Tears

MIAMI (AP)—Sixty wounded and ailing survivors of the Cuban invasion, still wearing their prison uniforms, limped down the steps of an airliner Saturday into the arms of their joyously weeping families.

Thousands of exiled Cubans thronged Miami Airport to greet the first men liberated since Fidel Castro's forces rounded up the invaders nearly a year ago.

ON CREDIT

The prisoners were released on credit. Members of the negotiating team which went to Havana to confer with Castro about the release said that so far not a cent has changed hands.

The returnees pledged they will go back to Havana's Principe Prison voluntarily unless a way is found to free their comrades-in-arms. They set no deadline for their return but a negotiating team member quoted Castro as telling the captives that he expects all will be out within three months.

WOULD RETURN

"We shall consider ourselves prisoners until the last one of our companions is at liberty. Should our companions not be set free, we would return voluntarily to the Castillo del Principe," said a spokesman for the invalids.

Subpoenas Issued For Steel Firms

U.S. marshals were set to serve the subpoenas which demand that the firms produce cost records for the Senate anti-monopoly group headed by Sen. Estes Kefauver.

The action was clear evidence that the threat of both congressional and justice department action still hung over "Big Steel" even though the industry surrendered to President Kennedy in the struggle over the price hike.

Neutrals Accept U.S. Tests

GENEVA (UPI)—Three of the eight neutral nations at the disarmament conference have accepted the U.S. view that atmospheric nuclear tests are necessary if there is no policed treaty banning them, informed sources said Saturday.

Diplomats said Sweden, Brazil and Mexico had disassociated themselves from the Soviet demand—and an Indian appeal—that the U.S. refrain from testing while the conference is in session.

The U.S. also has won assurances from all eight neutrals that they will remain at the conference even after the U.S. renews atmospheric testing.

CRITIC DALI

Dali Irks Dali

The surrealist painter disapproved of the staging of a musical fantasy in which he collaborated with French choreographer Maurice Bejart. He said certain essentials were missing such as "a skinned ox, a real lion, a streetcar and 25 motorcyclists."

Dali was in the grand box for the show at the theatre Royal de La Monnaie. He saw only the first 15 minutes. Then he rose from his seat and shouted amid uproar: "I am going away. Goodbye."

Eye-in-Sky Maps for All

The radio facsimile transmissions will be beamed to more than 100 countries, including the Soviet Union.

The bureau said the program will be conducted on an experimental basis for two months and will be continued if foreign weather services indicate they can make significant use of the maps.

Maps based on Tiros photos can be used to improve weather analyses and forecasts, to warn of previously undetected storms, and to brief pilots on their weather conditions over trans-oceanic flight routes.

U.K. Doctor

Red Tape Hobbles Medicine

By BOB PETRICK

The present British national health service was described as a "vast, complicated, inflexible, bureaucratic system" by a British medical and dental man Friday.

Dr. John Bunyan, inventor of the "Bunyan Bag" which saved thousands of burn cases during the Second World War, said under the present system doctors and dentists were subservient to bureaucrats.

'PALATIAL OFFICES'

"The only new medical buildings since the war have been the palatial offices of the regional boards totalling 10 times the costs of the original estimates," he said.

'CONDITIONS BAD'

"Conditions are so bad it is almost impossible to get nurses," said Dr. Bunyan. "In 10 years time when new hospitals are built half of them will be unusable because of the lack of nursing staff."

Dr. Bunyan spoke at the Victoria and District Dental Society meeting yesterday.

Giants Bomb Reds, 13-6 On Four-Homer Attack

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Willie Mays failed to hit a home run Saturday but teammate Orlando Cepeda hit two. So did Felipe Alou and San Francisco's rampaging Giants soared to their fifth victory without defeat, roughing up the Cincinnati Reds 13-6.

Pittsburgh and St. Louis also are unbeaten in the National League but the American League's last undefeated team was knocked off when Cleveland thrashed the Washington Senators 6-4.

The Pirates made it three in a row, defeating the New York Mets, who have yet to win a game in three attempts. The Giants scored in each of the first six innings, finishing Sam Ellis off in the third with a six-run explosion. Rookie Gaylord Perry didn't have much more on the ball than his Cincinnati counterpart. He gave way to Don Larsen who pitched a night game and coasted in to a 7-3 decision. Jerry Walker Lee Walls' single with the bases picked up the victory although allowing home runs to Floyd

The Los Angeles Dodgers beat

The LosAngele a Dodgers beat the Milwaukee Braves 3-4 on fall and none out in the ninth inning. It was another defeat for Warren Spahn, who hasn't beat the Dodgers in their home park since Aug. 21, 1948.

Bill Mazeroski hit a home run, Dick Stuart a triple and Roberto Clemente two doubles and a single to do most of the damage in the Pirates' triumph over the Mets. Vinegar Bend Mizell, with the relief help of Elroy Face in the eighth, won his first game of the campaign.

Ralph Terry failed to last six innings for the Yankees but an early 7-1 lead helped carry him to his second triumph. Phil Regan, the Detroit loser, lasted less than four innings. Elston Howard and Clete Boyer, with three hits apiece, shared hitting honors with Bill Stanchard. Norm Cash had two homers for the losers.

Nine pitchers trudged to the mound in the 32-degree weather in Minnesota. They issued 21 bases on balls, struck out 23 and threw four home run balls. The winner was Ryne Duren and the loser was Georges Maranda.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Stan Austman and his crack Saskatoon rink laced Lionel Wood of Edmonton 6-3 in 11 ends Saturday night to force an extra sudden-death match in the final of the Vancouver spring car bonspiel.

It was a vastly superior performance by the Austman rink under the skipping of Merv Mann. Wood tried various strategies after he dropped behind in the second end, but each proved a blunder.

Austman blanked the first end, and Wood's misses in the second, third, fourth and fifth end made it 6-0. The rinks alternated singles through the next six ends and Wood finally quit on the 11th.

Austman's victory put his won-loss record in the double-knockout series on a par with Wood, thus forcing the do-or-die match.

Austman defeated Jimmy Shields of Calgary 10-7 Saturday afternoon and moved into the final.

With an earlier 14-end, 7-6 victory over Walt Ashlee of Dawson Creek, B.C., the win gave Austman the B bracket title and a crack at A event winner Wood.

Austman had to beat Wood twice Saturday night.

Playing in the early hours of Saturday morning, Wood salted away the A event by beating Austman's youthful rink, 8-6.

The ice was in fine condition Friday night but during most of the day it had been frosty and capricious, causing occasional wild misses by the most consistent curlers.

Wood vowed it frightened him. He said: "It's the first time I've used the 'put-it-in-the-house somehow and pray' system."

Hard-Boiled Disqualified

. . . who's afraid?

TORONTO (CP) — Coach Imlach of Toronto Maple Leafs said Saturday he's not afraid of either Chicago Black Hawks or their fans, who have a reputation of making it rough for visiting teams.

"We won't be intimidated by either the Black Hawks or their crowd," Imlach said as he ran Tonight's game will be televised on channels 2 and 8 and broadcast on CBC starting at 6 p.m.

Leafs through a one-hour practice in preparation for tonight's third game of the Stanley Cup final. Toronto won the first two games of the best-of-seven series.

Tales of the antics of frenzied Chicago fans have drifted this way, but Imlach doesn't put much stock in them.

SAYS NO NONSENSE

Aside from the shenanigans of the fans, Imlach said there'll be "no nonsense" from Leafs.

"They'll play as hard as they can. After all, why should they work five more games when they can do it in two."

Imlach refuses to predict the outcome of the series, but those in contact with the Leaf coach feel he figures he can win the cup.

UPSET MONTREAL

The Hawks upset Montreal Canadiens in the semi-final last year and went on to defeat Detroit Red Wings to win the Stanley Cup. Both series went six games, the same number Hawks needed to upset Montreal in this year's semi-final.

The only change in the Leaf lineup will be the inclusion of left winger Bert Olmstead, out since March 11 with a cracked bone in his shoulder. The veteran Olmstead will likely see only sporadic action for a while.

Most likely to be benched to make room for him is right winger Eddie Shack, who sat out two games in the semi-final against New York Rangers and has seen little action since.

Pilous Plans Line Switch

CHICAGO (AP)—Some line-switching may be the strategy of the hard-pressed Chicago Black Hawks in trying to turn the tide against Toronto Maple Leafs as Stanley Cup championship play resumes tonight.

Trailing two games to none, the Black Hawks will welcome the roar of the wildly-partisan Chicago Stadium crowd, another capacity 16,666, after a lonesome time of it taking 4-1 and 3-2 trimmings in Toronto.

The setting is the same for the Hawks as in the cup semi-final series when, after losing the first two games to the champion Canadiens at Montreal, they returned home to launch a four-game sweep to gain the finals.

OBSERVERS AMAZED

There is nothing quite like a Chicago hockey crowd and Hawk observers were amazed in Toronto to find Maple Leaf fans cheering only when cheering was warranted, refraining from smoking and generally disporting in gentlemanly fashion.

In Chicago, the hockey addicts not only are constantly vociferous, but also occasionally demonstrate unerring marksmanship with a wide variety of missiles to express violent disapproval of the enemy.

In girding for the third game of the best-of-seven title scrimmage, Hawk coach Rudy Pilous indicated he might shuffle his various lines against the Maple Leafs, who like to butt heads just as well as the defending Stanley Cup champs.

Eves Wins In Hot Time

BERKELEY, Calif. — Lynn Eves of Victoria equalled his own best time here yesterday in winning the 100-yard dash in 9.6 seconds for Oregon State in a triangle meet with California and Fresno State.

At Eugene, Ore., Vancouver's Harry Jerome won both sprints for University of Oregon in a meet with Stanford, running the 100 in 9.5 seconds and the 220 (around a curve) in 21 seconds.

Broders Win In Overtime

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Lethbridge battled through three overtime periods Saturday night to defeat London 92-90 in the deciding game of the Canadian Senior Men's basketball championship.

Toronto Drivers Win Canada Car Rally

VANCOUVER (CP) — Victory apparently went to a Studebaker Lark Saturday night as the 4,800-mile Canadian Auto Rally ended in the rain on a note of high drama.

Drivers John Jones and Lou LaLonde of Toronto pulled into the finish line at a plush waterfront hotel and said they believed they had lost no more than a couple of penalty points on Saturday's mountain drive west from Trail.

The coveted manufacturers' team prize went to the trio of French-built Renaults, but only after an hour of nail-chewing anxiety.

TROUBLE NEAR HOPE

The third team car was known to be having serious engine trouble in the mountains coming down towards Hope. Drivers John Charters of Baie d'Urfe, Que., and Ian Worth of Lachine, Que., finally arrived only 20 minutes away from disqualification, with their rear-mounted engine rattling its bearings.

"We've been limping for 150 miles," said Charters.

The car may have piled up enough penalty points to knock it out of the top 10, but the team prize was assured to the Renaults if they simply finished within the maximum time limit.

The other manufacturers' team entries were eliminated earlier through loss of one of their cars.

The results will not be official until the rally organizers compute the final standings, a job expected to last until the early hours of today.

It's Written in Stars

By OSCAR FRALEY

NEW YORK (UPI) — If you fished after 6.36 a.m. today you wasted your time. Sonny Liston should win the heavyweight title in June. Mickey Mantle and Willie Mays will have good seasons and Arnold Palmer has a great chance of scoring his Big Slam this year.

It's all right there in the zodiac.

That means, as I understand it in a book sent to me by a friend, the way your life is affected by the moon, the stars and the various planets.

Personally I have seen my share of stars from time to time and nobody can convince me that it's a good thing for the shape of your features. There also are those who contend I've sat around in the moon and taken on a little too much shine from time to time.

DENT FENDER

But, as I get it, a lot of people swear by this stuff called astrology. And this little book, Madame Lasagna, gives you everything but the time of day you shouldn't step off the curb in front of a bus. On what are noted as "good days," is is presumed that if you step in front of the bus all you do is dent the fender.

Anyhow, I have looked up the future portents for some of my athletic heroes and it makes for interesting observations.

Consider the possibilities for Liston, who some time in June fights for the heavyweight title. All I can say is that Floyd Patterson better be careful what date he picks. The even numbered days are "adverse" for him and Liston has only four "bad" days—June 12, 20, 25 and 27. If they fight on the 12th it shapes up as a turkey. It's a bad day for both of them.

BE CAREFUL

Palmer, who last week won the Masters, has his heart set on a "Big Slam" of the U.S. and British opens and the P.G.A. Well, Arnie had better be careful on the final day of the open at Oakmount.

That's the one bad day of his whole competitive setup. All the rest of the days in those three events are going for him—as well as the fact that he's a helluva golfer.

Mays and Mantle have it going for them with 65 "good" days during the season against only 28 "adverse" days. On the in-between days they'll probably have to settle for triples.

BEST DAYS

As for you fishermen, the zodiac says that during the summer the best time for angling is from sunrise to three hours afterwards. And you can tell me about it when you get back.

One more thing. Use bait.

Whites Blank Cadets For Midget Rugby Title

Cowichan High beat Victoria High, 18-3, to win the junior division of Wanderers' seven-a-side tournament, and Cowichan, coached by Wanderers' Bill Murray, also took the consolation final with its second team, beating Sea Cadets.

Vancouver Meralomas won the senior division, 10-8, from James Bay Athletic Association.

Oil Kings Turn Back Wheat Kings

BRANDON (CP)— Edmonton Oil Kings whipped Brandon Wheat Kings 3-1 in the opening game of the best-of-seven Memorial Cup junior hockey semi-final series here Saturday.

Second game of the series will be played in Brandon Monday night and the series will move then to Edmonton.

It was Edmonton's 10th consecutive playoff victory. They have yet to lose. For Brandon it was their third loss in 12 playoff games.

Mike Pyke Repeats Empress Golf Win

Calgary's Mike Pyke won the men's Empress Golf Tournament championship for the second time in three years yesterday at Victoria Golf Club to become the first player in 32 years to win the title more than once.

To do it, Pyke beat defending champion Press Clark of Portland, 2 and 1.

First flight—J. C. Breyen (Sea) def. Dr. C. W. Coffen (Port) 2 and 1.

Sixth flight—R. B. Kelly (Cal) def. R. McWhister (Vic) at 19th.

More than 500 Easter treat packages supplied by the St. Mary's Women's Guild and the Opti-Mrs. Club were given out in parcels yesterday at the Free Food Stall.

Greater Victoria's needy families screened by welfare officials received lots of meat and potatoes in the monthly food hamper, said Mrs. E. E. Harper, stall convener. There were a couple of hundred pounds of moose meat, 82 turkeys cut in half for 166 families and three tons of potatoes.

Victoria Labor Council picked up food, and two youth groups, Delta Phi and Mystics, made about 40 deliveries.

Nominations Closed March 27

Tories' Ruling Stops Gelling In Bid to Unseat McPhillips

Executive Order Not Made Public

W. C. Gelling has been informed his name will not be allowed to stand for nomination as Progressive Conservative candidate for Victoria in the forthcoming federal election.

The former chairman of Greater Victoria school board, who announced last week he would oppose Conservative MP A. deB. McPhillips for the party nomination later this month, disclosed yesterday he had been ruled out on a technicality.

LIST CLOSED

Mr. Gelling said: "It appears the list of eligible candidates and voting members was closed March 27 by executive order."

This was done, Mr. Gelling said, despite the fact that as of March 27 "no public or private notice to the members or to the public had been made to declare the date of the nominating convention or stating when the membership list would be closed."

SERVICE RULE

Mr. Gelling said in a statement issued yesterday he applied and paid for a membership in the Progressive Conservative Party here April 6. Before that time, he said, eight years of service as a school trustee ruled out political activity.

He also pointed out the party's association in Victoria federal riding had not met publicly "for the best part of a year."

FIND DIFFICULT

"I don't challenge the legality of these arrangements," Mr. Gelling said. "I find it difficult, however, to reconcile this practice with accepted democratic principles in conducting public affairs."

Mr. Gelling said he received a notice in the mail Friday that the nominating convention was to be held in the auditorium of Royal Canadian Legion, Britannia branch, April 26 at 8 p.m.

APPEARS FUTILE

"Under these circumstances," he added, "I have no alternative but to inform my supporters it appears futile for me to attend the nomination convention.

"I sincerely feel, however, that my offer of additional public service should be reviewed by a larger group of Conservatives."

REPORTS DENIED

Westwood:

Tourist Bid For Funds To Be Heard

Recreation Minister Earle Westwood last night promised a "sympathetic hearing" to the problems of the Expo-Lodging organizations in Victoria and Vancouver.

The minister said no approach had been made to his office for aid in combating possible collapse of central tourist accommodation systems through lack of staff and money.

Mr. Westwood said he understood that inquiries for accommodation were "pouring into these offices at a fantastic rate," and that provincial government action would depend on "what proposals are made" by the B.C. Chamber of Commerce.

Meanwhile, Ald. Austin Curtis said last night the provincial government and municipalities should help the Expo-Lodging tourist accommodation reservation office here.

Ald. Curtis, a member of the city finance committee which earlier rejected an appeal for municipal grants, said the situation has now changed.

Brentwood College Plans Buildings

MILL BAY—A building program to provide facilities for 200 boys will be undertaken this summer by Brentwood College.

The school reopened last fall after a successful campaign to raise funds from private and corporate sources.

Plans are being prepared to provide new laboratories, a gymnasium, more living quarters for boys and staff and other alterations. Financing has been arranged and construction will start this month, to be completed in time for the new school year next September.

Vancouver governors are H. R. Whittall, J. W. Pitts, P. A. Chernialsky, F. Rogers, L. Scott-Monerieff and Dr. M. Young, while Victoria members are James Gengo, A. Kenning, R. A. H. Lort and R. Bull, all but one being old boys.

Headmaster is Mr. D. D. Mackenzie.

Commander At Comox Off to Congo

COMOX—Wing Commander Joseph C. McCarthy, 42, commanding officer of 407 Demon maritime patrol squadron of the RCAF station here since April, 1959, has been transferred to a post in the Congo, the RCAF announced Saturday.

He will become air transport officer with UN headquarters in Leopoldville and his duties will involve coordination of all Congo transport flights under UN command.

Bold Island Art Only Choice In Seattle Booth

By JUNE LEARY

The painting is a vivid totem the original of which was carved exactly 100 years ago at Fort Rupert and which will be part of Victoria's centennial theme.

Jean Lytton turns out water colors with the depth and texture usually associated with oil paintings. Her intrigue with British Columbia's Indian lore has led her to work exclusively in this medium.

An added tourist attraction here this summer will be five other paintings in the Nanaimo tourist bureau. She will display 25 more pictures in a private gallery in Victoria.

Waterworks Ahead In Extension Plan

PORT ALBERNI — The waterworks extension project here is well ahead of schedule, according to a report from general superintendent Len Crowshaw.

Mr. Crowshaw predicted there would be no shortage of water in the city this summer, providing all main connections can be completed. He said that, if restrictions are imposed, they will be only temporary.

The connection of Bainbridge Lake to the existing source at China Creek, renewal of the main pipeline and additional storage facilities to service the high areas of the city are included in the project being carried on by city crews.

Restrictions Blamed

Sooke Salmon Traps Stays Closed in 1962

The $100,000 per year salmon fish-trap operations at Sooke will not re-open this year because of federal fishing restrictions, a company spokesman said last night.

Sooke residents worked the traps from 1904, when they first became legal in British Columbia, until the closure in 1958.

The operation is owned by Sooke Harbor Fishing and Packing Co. Ltd., a subsidiary of J. H. Todd and Sons Ltd. of Vancouver.

Robert Payne, of Vancouver, general manager of the parent company, told the Colonist the Sooke company will be sold to a co-operative association of Sooke residents when restrictions are lifted.

Sooke fishermen used to work their traps five days a week, bringing in first grade spring salmon and coho.

Then there was a buildup of the B.C. fishing fleet farther up the west coast, in Port San Juan at Port Renfrew. The government "clamped down to conserve fish and squeezed the traps right out."

Cowichan Indian Band

Teepee-Style Church to Hold First Service Easter Sunday

DUNCAN—Volunteer workers under the leadership of the missionary to the Cowichan Indian band, Rev. Joseph Rossiter, expect to hold the first service in the new teepee-style church south of Duncan at Easter.

Consecration of St. Michael's, to serve Indians from the Koksilah and Somenos reserves, will take place sometime in the fall after the new bishop of the Victoria diocese has been appointed.

Construction of the church, which will accommodate 120 worshippers, began last July and the cost is estimated at $4,000.

Father Rossiter says employing paid labor instead of volunteers from the Knights of Columbus and members of the Indian bands would have meant a cost of at least $12,000.

Except for the rafters the entire building, 56 by 24 feet and 28 feet high, is made of cedar wood with large colored glass panels in the front and back sections.

The V-shaped roof, reaching to the ground, is covered with hand-made cedar shakes from Lake Cowichan. The colored glass came from Victoria and the Mexican mission style light fixtures were acquired from Ontario.

Injury Call Answered By Lifeboat

TOFINO — The Tofino lifeboat was called last night to the aid of a workman at Hecate Bay who had suffered a broken leg in an accident.

The plea for help was radioed to Island Airlines at Tofino early in the evening and relayed to the lifeboat station.

The injured man, an employee of Ventures Ltd., was apparently struck by a rolling log.

Huge Rally Of Schools Set in June

Massed Sunday school choirs and a 100-piece band will combine in a music and worship service during a mammoth centennial Sunday school rally in Beacon Hill Park at 3 p.m., June 3.

Greater Victoria Sunday school superintendents representing more than 60 Sunday schools will participate in the rally.

A choir processional through the park will take place before the service.

Alberni, Courtenay

Voters Approve Sewers, Schools

By MARGARET TREBETT AND TED GASKELL

Third time proved lucky yesterday for Alberni's controversial $600,000 sewer bylaw, while Courtenay voters gave quick approval to a $930,000 schools building plan.

The sewer bylaw, rejected twice before and as recently as last December, won a 72 per cent majority with 825 in favor, 316 against and 30 ballots spoiled.

The school construction scheme, providing new classrooms and activity rooms over the next three or four years won by 76 per cent with 1,211 in favor, 382 against and 16 ballots spoiled.

HOPE FOR MARCH

More than 61 per cent of Alberni's voters went to the polls and pleased civic officials said they hoped to complete the sewer system by the end of March.

If they do so, they will be eligible for a $17,000 rebate on a Central Mortgage loan. The city also plans to take advantage of federal grants by doing most of the work next winter.

The bylaw covers all of Alberni except a sparsely-populated area along River Road. It was opposed by former mayor Mabel Anderson, defeated last December in her bid for re-election.

In Courtenay, about 31 per cent of the eligible local voters cast ballots and only two areas, Tsolum and Union Bay, fell short of the needed margin.

ACTIVITY ROOM

School board chairman James Simon said the first project, addition of two rooms at a Comox school, will be completed by September. An activity room at Arden school also will be built this summer.

Other items are a three-room elementary school in Courtenay, a four-room elementary structure in Comox, a new junior secondary school in Cumberland, major additions to Courtenay junior secondary school and new rooms for other schools.

City Chinese to Launch Own Drive for Hospital

Victoria's Chinese community will launch its own drive next week to raise funds for St. Joseph's Hospital building fund.

An official of the drive to raise $350,000 for the hospital expansion program said the Chinese Consolidated Benevolent Association has volunteered to conduct the canvass.

The offer was made by association president Fun Lee and Harry Lou Poy, a member of the executive.

They plan to hold a meeting Wednesday to set up canvass teams which will seek donations among the Chinese community.

Meanwhile, the general corporations division of the drive will meet Monday to report to chairman Frank Grieve on progress.

A drive official said 160 canvassers are currently covering the city business community.

Nanaimo–Victoria

Pilgrims Plan Long Walk With Cross

NANAIMO—A pilgrimage to carry the Holy Cross between Nanaimo and Victoria will begin here at 2 p.m. Wednesday.

The cross will be blessed by Rt. Rev. Monsignor A. G. Baker of St. Peter's before being carried by pilgrims on the first stage of the 70-mile journey, which was organized by local Knights of Columbus.

The following day the cross will be blessed by Father Allbury before leaving St. Mary's Church in Ladysmith for Chemainus.

It also will be blessed by Father Price of St. Joseph's Catholic Church in Chemainus, Father Monahan of St. Edward's Catholic Church in Duncan, Father J. Rossiter of the Church of St. Francis Xavier in Mill Bay, and Father O'Brien of the Church of Our Lady of the Rosary at Langford.

Pilgrims are expected to arrive in Victoria on time for Easter Sunday pontifical high mass at 11 a.m.

Grass Roots Worry

It's not the selection of furnishings and equipment for the new hospital. It's not planning renovation of the old one as a chronic patient hospital. It's not his usual duties as administrator.

He claims the thing that worries him most is whether the grass around the new hospital will be up in time for the grand opening in October!

4-H Lamb Club Plans Dry Run for Judging

QUALICUM BEACH — A public relations committee has been formed by the Parksville-Qualicum 4-H Club and Mary Couling was appointed chairman. Other members are Mary Morris, Marion Morris and Randi Christiansen.

A quiz about the dairy cow was conducted by George Malcolm and speeches were given by Mary Couling on the Colombo Plan and by Mary Morris on the Amazon River.

The club was invited to attend a lamb judging practice by the Parksville-Qualicum 4-H Lamb Club at Don Beaton's farm April 29 at 1.30 p.m. and will attend a Jersey judging practice Saturday at Arrowsmith Farm.

Plans are under way for the preparation of an entry in the annual May Day parade here and Parksville Equipment Co. has offered to donate a tractor for use in the parade.

Next meeting will be May 4 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Malcolm.

Cowichan River Path Issue Up Before Officials Monday

DUNCAN—Possibility of a footpath along the Cowichan River will be discussed here Monday by members of the Cowichan Fish and Game Association and officials of the department of recreation and its parks branch.

The association has for months pressed the provincial government to secure property along the river for the public path. Local governments and service clubs strongly supported the bid.

Meanwhile, the association has decided to send a letter to North Cowichan council expressing support for a boat launching ramp at Maple Bay.

A spokesman said that, if areas in the bay are restricted for swimmers and boats and marked with buoys, it will be safe.

Battle Looms

NANAIMO — The active, militant fish and game club here is donning its armor for another battle over access.

The group is working hard to get help from the government and to woo the farmers.

Access committee chairman Ted Barsby says club representatives have held meetings with the farmers' institute, in an effort to patch up differences that have existed between hunters and farmers for many years. He said the meeting was "friendly."

Too Few Even of Those Who Live Close Now

The LURE of the ISLANDS

This is a story of the islands—"where every prospect pleases." It is a story familiar to many who have explored, as we did, but it is one I have long wanted to tell.

By KATE SHAW COLLEY

Bill and I took our small car with us in the ferry Cy Peck, named for a great Canadian soldier of the First World War, and as we pulled away from Swartz Bay for Salt Spring Island the magnificent scene of sea and shadowed coves, the soft-breasted islands and the caressing sky drifted before us.

We had breakfast shortly after leaving Salt Spring for North Pender, the menu written with many flourishes on a cardboard pie plate.

We passed islands like floating wedding cakes, barren, rocky islets, nesting places for enormous colonies of water fowl. There were larger islands privately owned, with low-spreading summer homes, private piers and sheltered coves.

The Cy Peck announced loudly and shrilly that it was nearing Port Washington—would one call it the capital of North Pender?—anyway it is an important centre.

The "town" had come down to meet the ferry, visitors, old-timers, those with a job to do—the young man who turned the winches for the landing ramp, the man who caught the lines—the mailman, campers returning home with bed rolls and knapsacks, cars awaiting guests, cars going aboard, and two truck loads of live sheep.

Now we were ready to land. Foot passengers first, please. What moved on wheels followed. The tide was very low and negotiating that slip looked rather formidable.

Close by was the store; the hills rose sharply. High above on the rocks among arbutus trees was a tiny cabin, squatting like a one-eyed gnome watching over the waterfront.

Bill said, "That's where I should like to be—in that tiny, brown shingled cabin."

"Why not?" said a friendly voice. "Ask Miss Joan S. Purchase, she knows all about it."

And sure enough, Miss Purchase did know all about it. A key came off a hook, exchanged hands, and the cabin was ours for as long as we wanted it. That was our introduction to Island hospitality.

The little car climbed a steep road, crossed a rough meadow, on through a small wooded piece, and there we were, high up on the rocks, as free as air, with a "privacy of glorious light" as far as the eye could travel. Our one roomed castle had a small porch for the woodbox and water pails—inside, two cot beds, a camp cooking stove, chairs, table, a dresser with a few cooking utensils, oil lamps, and—luxury of luxuries—and old fashioned early American clock, with a loud, friendly tick, striking the hours with what Bill called a pronounced New England accent. Outside were two large oil drums brimming with rainwater.

That evening we walked through the wood, over the meadow and down a road to our neighbors' place for drinking water. Walking through the garden we remarked about the amount of chicken wire surrounding the fruit trees.

Coming to meet us was Mrs. Oscar Hanna, the owner of the place. She was laden down with an assortment of garments and sheets. "These," she explained, "are to protect my shrubs and plants from the deer every night. These predators come down from the hills and enjoy the tid-bits in my garden and not an apple left within their reach, and all the choicest buds gone from the lilacs. Just look at the gladiolas—the blooms left and every new bud gone. Now that it is almost too late I am spreading clothes over the low bushes and flowers, but it's a constant war and the deer usually win."

"Come," said Mrs. Hanna. "I'll introduce you to the pump. Use the water freely but leave the handle down—this insures a little water still left in the pipe to prime the next pumping." We were always careful to observe this rule.

We felt sorry for Mrs. Hanna. Such an ardent gardener and lover of flowers!

Without lighting our oil lamps we sat into the small hours watching and listening as sights and sounds came to us. The midnight ferry between Victoria and Vancouver passed, a jewelled ornament on the velvet cushion of night. Processions of fishing boats passed—fairy ships with their red and green lamps, outward bound to the fishing grounds.

We found the main roads in excellent condition, signposts at almost every intersection. We came to Hope Bay, the second main centre, with a very good store down by the Government Wharf. We passed a church and school and a cluster of comfortable cottages. We discovered a delightful little tea house, with service unexcelled. What a view from the top of the hill!

We spent a day on South Pender Island. Bedwell Harbor seemed to be the main centre. On this day it was alive with young naval personnel who stormed the general store.

On one side of the harbor rocks rose in precipitous height, bearing in many colored letterings names of Her Majesty's ships that from time to time had ridden at anchor in this little harbor which could rightly claim its own centenary.

Interesting features about the Gulf Islands are the marked differences not only in topography of each but also in the characteristics of the inhabitants. Two particular traits, however, were common—a readiness to talk and a warm hospitality.

We had a busy week in Galiano and found the car most useful with 30 miles of road to travel. Up the road from the Government Wharf was a sizable village with several shops. There was plenty of accommodation, lodge, motels and charming guest houses. The island seemed made for the biker of today. Farms sloped down to the sea. Here were acres of pasturage, orchards, and gardens that had an old world atmosphere.

We climbed to a high promontory—sheep roamed here, nimble as goats.

We drove through what appeared to be virgin forest—a deer ran in front of the car—and there were glimpses of little bays, farmsteads and summer cottages.

We travelled to the north end of the island and found an Indian village. I picked blackberries with two little Indian girls who cast shy glances in my direction and giggled when I talked to them. At the extreme end of the rounded rocky coast were two lighthouses. There was a brisk breeze and the sea was choppy. We watched a school of killer whales cavorting quite close to shore—enormous hump-backed creatures.

Leaving the Indian village and travelling south again we passed a clearing where stood a plain, unpainted house. Something about its simplicity of line attracted us. The house stood four square, looking out to sea like a straight backed, long-skirted Victorian matron, always meticulously orderly in her habits and surroundings, about whom many children must have clustered. Families she had sheltered would regard her with a deep and abiding respect.

One Sunday afternoon we were invited into this house, built by Sinlay Murcheson. It was tea time; a fire burned brightly on the hearth about which sat a family group and we were made welcome.

The same austerity and simplicity of line on the outside of the house we found reflected on the inside. The narrow mantel caught the glow of firelight, the high ceiling and small window panes—the flooring that still bore markings of the adze—but above all was the fragrance of old, well cared for wood that seemed to permeate the atmosphere and reflect the care of hands long stilled.

This simple, windswept house was approaching its 100 birthday.

We waved to Mayne Island, promising a visit later.

There was just a brief call at Saturna. That lovely island made us long to linger.

Even so brief a glimpse of these beautiful islands is like looking into a book of glowing illustrations. One longs to possess it. One hates to surrender it.

Here, surely, is a fertile ground for travel's encouragement, for holiday-making and for leisurely living. The amazing thing is it is familiar to so few.

AMONG THE ISLANDS are many such lovely, placid spots. This is Galiano's Georgeson Bay.

'BILL' BARKER WAS GREAT

AMONG the GREATEST

Manitoba-born William G. (Bill) Barker, like hundreds of young Canadians who volunteered for service with the Royal Flying Corps in the First World War, had an itch for action.

So he wasted as little time as possible in realizing his ambition to tangle with the Imperial German Air Force.

Story and Illustration by ED COSGROVE

His instructor termed him "a natural-born flyer"—a description the record has confirmed.

It was a long road to combat flying for Barker. He went over seas with a cavalry unit, a start made by many of Canada's flyers. It seemed a natural evolution from the dash and sweep of cavalry tactics to aerial combat.

Canadians brought an easy informality into a service which, in many cases, was riddled with the mess snobbery introduced from the caste system existing in crack British regiments.

Britain's moody ace, "Mick" Mannock, a man from a "lower class" home, suffered under the covert sneers of the products of Sandhurst and the public schools.

Canadian attitudes helped create the spirit of the air force and win the new service's battle honors. And Bill Barker, termed by the late Air Marshal W. A. "Billy" Bishop the "greatest fighter pilot the world has ever known," personified that attitude.

Bill Barker was something of an enigma. He left no memoirs other than his combat reports. His final score of 53 enemy aircraft destroyed would have been higher, for a Barker practice crediting some victories to flying mates, plus a certain carelessness in seeking confirmation.

He wasn't after fame. He was a natural-born pilot, with all the attendant enthusiasm for his job.

His first victory came shortly after his transfer to the Royal Flying Corps, while serving as an observer. In a slow-moving two-seater, Barker downed a German Fokker—the best fighter in the air in 1916.

The top brass appreciated his talents with a machine gun and promoted him from corporal to second lieutenant.

But Bill Barker didn't care much for the role of passenger and was soon routed to flying school.

Then came—to Barker—disaster. On graduation, he was sent to an observation squadron and his ability to handle the lumbering old plane tabbed him as a natural for the job of instructor.

Back in England, Barker chafed for action. And his way of getting what he wanted was to break every rule in the stiff-slim rule book. He flew under bridges, snap-rolled his plane at tree-top heights above the flying field. Only a man with his natural flying skill could survive the things he did with that plane.

It was either court martial or transfer, and wiser heads prevailed—Barker was transferred back to the front. After all, there was a sizeable chunk of money invested in turning this wild, young Canadian into a flyer.

He returned to combat as commander of a flight in No. 28 Squadron. Equipped with Sopwith Camels, the squadron operated over ground soaked by the blood of many of Barker's countrymen—Vimy Ridge.

Flying every day weather permitted, Barker quickly scored a double kill. Alone over Vimy Ridge, he attacked a formation of seven German fighters, downing two and scattering the rest.

Barker evolved a new tactic which was to help place the Camel on record as the greatest destroyer of enemy planes in action during that war. A total of 1,634 enemy planes fell before the guns of Camels.

The rotary engine of the Sopwith product created a torque which enabled the plane to literally turn on a dime. Its wide, flat wings and stubby body gave it incredible manoeuverability, especially at low altitudes.

The latter feature was soon utilized by the Canadian. One day, deep within German territory, his flight tangled with a superior formation of 10 Albatross at dusk. Barker lured one German down to the tree-tops, then spun around and downed the Albatross. A second German pounced on his tail, but Barker repeated the manoeuver and sent the second German flaming into the ground.

If You Can Find Your Way There

Archives Museum

A House of Treasures

You go by way of the general entrance to the Legislative Buildings, straight down the corridor till you can't go any farther, turn sharp to the right, duck at once into a narrow little alley on your left — which appears singularly foreign to the rest of the noble structure — on through some glass doors past a long torpedo which points firmly in the direction you don't go, then turn off to the left up several flights of stairs. Then, and only then, if you've figured out your bearings correctly and kept your head, you're in the Provincial Archives Department.

THESE WERE MASTER IMPERIAL weights and measures of Victoria's colonial days, now in the B.C. Archives. (Robin Clarke Photo.)

By
VIVIENNE CHADWICK

"By then, of course, you can see the reason for the little alley. The Archives staff, having hidden itself away so very thoroughly in the heart of this maze of corridors, obviously couldn't find its way out, and was therefore obliged to tunnel through to the outer world once more.

Be that as it may, once you have penetrated their fastness, the members of this same staff are most co-operative, and this writer owes them much appreciation for friendly assistance and information regarding their well-guarded treasures.

One of the first things that catches the eye is a very fine scale model, in copper, of the first locomotive ever used by the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway. It's a big one, about six feet long, and was built in 1886 by Charles Fox, and loaned to the Archives by its owner, Colonel Chester Harris, a quarter of a century ago. Every copper, brass, and bronze detail is perfect, and the cab is a neat piece of cabinet work in walnut. A pen and ink sketch beside the model bears a notice to the effect that this is engine No. 374, which the 'first through train into Vancouver', but whether the sketch and the model are supposed to be the same isn't quite clear, as there is a difference in the lip of the smokestacks, and the model doesn't repeat the number.

Nobody plays with it, they said. A shame! It certainly looks as though it were built to run, its moving parts really being movable, although in answer to an inquiry one of the staff remarked, a trifle drily, that while he believed it had once been operated, whether this had been 'by internal mechanism or external persuasion' he wasn't prepared to say!

NEARBY IS A LARGE GLASS CASE with what must surely be one of the handsomest fire department dress uniforms ever designed. The skirted coat is white, with a double row of big white buttons, white braid, red collar, and a metal badge in the centre of the chest with VFD and crossed axes on it. On either side of this are helmets, rather like those of the ancient Roman centurions, brilliantly silver-plated, with leather and chain chin-straps. The men must truly have looked magnificent.

In the same case are three ceremonial silver trumpets, heavily chased and with silk tasselled cords attached. The centre one of these is in all probability sterling silver and engraved: "Presented by J. C. Keenan, late Chief Engineer, Victoria Fire Department. October, 2nd, 1885." It also adds, a bit warily, I thought, that the trumpet was to be held by the Chief Engineer "for the time being."

Visitors here who are fond of smooth, shining brassware will find it difficult to keep their hands off a set of Imperial Measures, which stands on the top of the same filing cases as the locomotive. There are nine of them, from the great bushel unit down to the little half gill, all marked with their size and the words "Vancouver Island 1865."

Even more alluring, somehow, are three highly polished spherical weights with handles on top, 14 pounds, 28 pounds and 56 pounds, which would look wonderful inside the writer's stone fireplace, and which are also stamped with a crown and the royal VR. A brass rod is an Imperial yard, and all pieces carry the maker's name, Potter of London. A solid brass bar beside all these is undecorated, but was probably the barrier, hinged at one end, fitted for a slot at the other, which once constituted the "Bar of the House," and explains the phrase when someone was "brought before the bar"—presumably for reprimand!

IN THE OUTER MUSEUM there stands on the floor against a wall a heavy and weathered wooden cross, once painted white. It is some four feet high, and was taken from the church of St. John the Divine, of Yale, B.C., reputed to be the oldest wooden church in the province standing on its original site.

It was built by the Royal Engineers, and as a notice dated 1956 states that it was believed then to have been almost a century old, it may be well over that mark now.

Also a relic of the work of the Royal Engineers is a section of a tree, dry and grey with age, on which the deeply cut blaze reads "Palmer Camp No. 8." This was a Lieutenant Henry S. Palmer, who conducted a survey, perhaps the first, from North Bentinck Arm to the Cariboo in 1862.

On the floor beneath a glass case is quite the largest bellows I have ever seen. At a guess, about five feet long, and looking incredibly ancient and heavy. Surely too big for a blacksmith's forge. It would take two people to work it. What, then?

Another oddity is a Spode cake stand of sorts, but a double-tiered one, which comes apart, and carries the crest of the Hudson's Bay Company. The department has been trying, said a member of the staff, to find out more about this article, but all that is known at the moment is that it came out of Fort Victoria in the very early days.

The great majority of pieces, of coourse, are self-explanatory, and are more or less what one finds in any museum of this type. There are scores of old pictures, some extremely well done and interesting, some rather dreary, some very quaint. One of these last is an oil of a ship in Esquimalt's graving dock, by J. D. McLean, dated 1886 —with the drydock of that period looking something like a large hand basin.

Bailey Begbie. There are maps, ship models, portraits and costumed, coins and the trading tokens issued by Hudson's Bay. An imposing pair of scales made of wrought iron and brass, their use not designated, stands several feet high. There is a very old wooden wheel and a heavy ox-yoke which makes the imagination cringe for the poor animals that wore it.

IN A GLASS CASE with weapons, handcuffs, miners' equipment and such, is something which the innocent and uninitiated wouldn't know ever existed . . . a device to be worn inside the sleeve of a card-sharper! It was obviously designed to fit to the fore-arm, and may have been operated by a contraction of the elbow. In any event, at its base, just where the cuff would cover it, is a spring attachment to hold in readiness—and shoot out when desired—any planned card. The ace of spades sits in this one, all ready. And whether or not this interesting example of key shenanigans is obsolete or still in use, this chronicler wouldn't know!

Well a full hour and more may be spent profitably in Victoria's Archives, especially by someone who prowls with an eye for the unusual. After that, if you have a good memory, the chances are that you will be able to find your way out of the building eventually, though the odds are against it happening the first try.

BATTLE of BARKERVILLE

Much is being written about the restoration of Barkerville and the various aspects of life in the gold rush days. But how many boxing fans know that the British Columbia championship was desided at Barkerville in 1867?

And what a fight it must have been for the 1,500 spectators: two burly boys, stripped to the waist, belaboring each other with unprotected fists and unhampered by the niceties of Marquis of Queensbury rules. They were not generally adopted until 1872.

The fight went 29 rounds in a makeshift outdoor ring. The referee and umpires kept out of the ring to avoid being hurt. The two battlers used headlocks and body throws and weren't above clobbering each other in the kneeling position.

The blood ran red — and the whiskey like sparkling gold in emergency bars set up just outside the melee.

The 'Cariboo Sentinel' recorded the event. The July 29 issue noted that the arrangements were entered into on a Saturday evening at Scott and McHardy's Saloon. Fight day was set for September 24.

George Wilson, 33, 175 pounds and Joe Eden, 27, 165 pounds were named as the warriors.

We can assume from their performance that they were veteran pugilists. But the 'Sentinel' does not say whether one or the other held the B.C. title previously or whether this was to be the first fight for that honor. This is more than possible because British Columbia was then only nine years old.

The match was set up by miners who raised $1,000 on behalf of each fighter; winner to take all. Adler and Barry's Saloon was named to hold the purse.

On September 23 the 'Sentinel' reported the fight was to feature reserved seats. By September 23, the purse had grown to $2,400.

The ring was built in a clearing on a government land reserve at Valley Creek, three miles east of Barkerville.

"At an early hour in the morning large crowds of sight-seers, many of whom had come from great distances the previous evening, could be observed wending their way to the scene of action," it was later recorded.

"Before noon there could not have been less than 1,500 persons assembled."

It was a bright sunny day, tempered with a cool breeze. The crowd was good-humored and enthusiastic. Betting was lively. The ring was 24 feet square. Around it was an open space four feet in width for the referee and two umpires. Outside of this was the seated area—and no doubt there were small boys in every tree within sight.

At 11.20 a.m. the principals and their seconds entered the ring and the crowd chose one Dan Morgan as referee and William Phillips and Thomas Archdale as umpires.

The fighters tossed for a choice of corners. Eden won and chose to place his back to the sun.

The seconds decorated their fighter's corners with their colors: red for Eden and blue for Wilson. At 11.55 a.m. the fighters stripped to the waist — their fine muscular development forming the subject of universal comment and drawing forth a burst of admiration on all sides."

"See this five dollar bill? I made it with tender loving care in 1948. Today it's worth only two dollars and forty-seven cents."

Both showed a great deal of confidence. They parried or sparred for a time, then Wilson led off without effect. Eden countered "and planted a stinger on Wilson's left peeper, drawing the claret. First blood claimed and allowed for Eden."

In the second round, Eden disclosed his strategy when he again landed a good blow, then fell to the ground to escape retaliation.

He did this again in the third, the fourth, fifth and sixth rounds. By the seventh, it was evident Wilson was losing his temper. While Eden was "falling" Wilson managed to get a head lock on him "and administered some well-directed blows, at the same time wringing his neck thoroughly."

Eden survived and went back into his hit-and-run tactics. Wilson managed to hit him twice while he was either falling or fallen which brought a warning from the referee. In the 14th round Eden threw Wilson heavily to the ground. The betting odds were now $60 to $50 on Eden but there were no takers.

In the last round, Wilson got a severe blow from Eden and when Eden "went to grass" for protection, Wilson struck him anyway. Because of the earlier warning, Wilson lost the fight for this foul.

A subsequent editorial in the 'Sentinel' said Wilson fought for glory while Eden fought for money, adding, "How far his (Eden's) generalship is consistent with strict laws of the ring, we know not. But this we do know, it is not consistent with the usual mode of English warfare."

However, the town seemed to bear Eden no grudge for his tactics even though something like $12,000 changed hands. There was not a single quarrel reported from the saloons of Barkerville over the championship fight.

"The sun was warm but the wind was chill,
"You know how it is with an April day . . ."

But what a love of a month! There is a sort of sorcery in April. Spring has begun to weave its web of magic . . . stirring and quickening not only the green growing things, but the spirits of people as well. April is worth waiting for . . . worth all that's gone before . . . the snow, the rain, the dark days, the overshoes and the fuel bill.

EASTER TREAT

the Color of Spring

MURIEL WILSON'S THOUGHT FOR FOOD

We have become used to a world with black and white overtones, then suddenly there is a brilliant blue sky, the dark branches have a million points of green, color flames in the garden and the air is gentle as a baby's breath. The miracle of spring is beginning and the ordinary routine of living, breathing, looking and feeling becomes exciting.

With spring in the air and a song in our heart, let's start off with a dreamy dessert . . . a really glamorous, three-layer ice cream. It is pretty as a spring bonnet and as delicious as it looks. The recipe is brand new, so why don't you be the first to serve it? It is called Three Star Delight. It would be the perfect happy ending for your Easter dinner.

THREE STAR DELIGHT. Pour a large can of evaporated milk into an ice cream tray and chill in the freezing compartment until crystals form around the edges. While the milk is chilling, prepare the following ingredients in three separate bowls:

Lemon layer . . . combine one quarter cup sugar, one tablespoon grated lemon peel and one-quarter cup fresh lemon juice;

Grape layer . . . add one-quarter cup sugar to one-quarter cup grape juice and one-quarter cup fresh lemon juice;

Avocado layer . . . add one-quarter cup fresh lemon juice to one-half cup mashed and sieved avocado pulp. Blend in one-quarter cup orange juice, one tablespoon grated orange peel and one-half cup sugar.

Remove the chilled milk from the freezer and whip until very stiff. Divide into thirds, folding one-third into each of the fruit mixtures. Pour grape mixture into ice cream tray, then the layer of avocado. Top with lemon layer. Freeze until very stiff. Cut in horizontal slices to serve. Serves six to eight.

The spring colors of this lovely ice cream will blend beautifully to an Easter table color scheme. It is simple to make and no rewhipping during freezing necessary. Put it in the ice tray, slip it in the freezer, then forget about it until time for dessert.

EASTER EGG NESTS are ideal to serve with the special ice cream. For each nest frost three chocolate cookies with orange icing and stack them together. Top each with long-shred, sweet cocoanut and put a few jelly beans in each nest.

For the orange icing, combine one cup icing sugar, two tablespoons melted butter, one tablespoon grated orange peel and enough orange juice to make a spreading consistency.

With Easter only a breath away of course you'll want to make Hot Cross Buns . . . a kitchen filled with their spicy fragrance is sheer delight . . . and I can't think of a better way to please a family than to have home-made buns on your Easter table.

THREE STAR DELIGHT . . . with the little edible "nest" described in this article beside it.

HOT CROSS BUNS . . . Sprinkle two packages of yeast over three-quarters cup lukewarm water in which two teaspoons of sugar have been dissolved. Scald one cup of milk and pour over one-half cup each of sugar and butter or margarine. Cool to lukewarm, then add the yeast mixture and beat well. Add two cups all-purpose flour and beat again vigorously. Cover with a damp cloth and let stand in a warm place for about 20 minutes. It should be full of bubbles. Add two well-beaten eggs, two teaspoons salt, one teaspoon cinnamon, half a teaspoon of nutmeg or mace, one teaspoon grated lemon peel, one cup currants or raisins washed, rinsed and patted dry in a towel. Now gradually add about four more cups flour. Add a cup at a time until you have a soft dough. Turn out on a floured board and knead lightly until smooth. Place in a greased bowl, cover and let rise in a warm place until double in bulk. Pinch off pieces the size you want and with buttered fingers form into balls. Place an inch apart on a greased cookie sheet. With scissors (wet the blades) cut crosses in the top of each bun. Let rise again until light. Bake in a pre-heated 375° oven for about 20 minutes. Makes about three dozen, according to size. Cool on a rack. When cold drizzle icing into the crosses.

The cross on the top of hot cross buns has a religious significance . . . it being a sign of the Christian faith. There are many stories as to how these buns were tied to the Easter story. I came across a new one recently. It seems that the sweet spicy buns now sold by the tens of thousands in bakeries and food stores across the country during the Lenten season were first called Moon Cakes. In ancient times the moon goddess was widely worshipped among pagan peoples. Her worshippers set aside certain days to honor her . . . usually at the new and the full moon. On these days, special "moon cakes" were baked to bring to her temples. Each cake was imprinted with the oxen's crossed horns and known as bon, meaning ox. The name was later changed to boun and still later to bun.

The ancient Greeks interpreted the crosses as the four phases of the moon. There were some who said the crosses were merely for easy breaking as a sacrifice.

Early Saxons ate what they called "cross bread" in honor of their goddess of light. When Christianity was introduced, efforts were made to outlaw the custom of baking cakes for the gods and goddesses. But realizing the difficulty of separating devoted people from their festivals and religious celebrations, it was found easier to take over the most alluring of the pagan customs and give them new meanings. Thus the cross on the bun became the symbol of Christian faith. The making of the buns became a rite that belonged exclusively to the church. The holy buns were distributed to communicants after Easter Mass.

In England, as far back as 1252, the demand for these special "cross marked" buns was so great that the bakers began making them in competition with the church. Although the practice was forbidden, the unhallowed buns sold like hot cakes. Gradually as Protestantism spread, the ban was removed and they were no longer considered holy bread. Spices, currants and sugar toppings were added to make the "Hot Cross Buns" more appealing. The cry of the street vendor was familiar to every English ear . . .

"One a penny buns
Two a penny buns,
One a penny, two a penny
Hot cross buns!"

BRIDE'S CORNER

Here is how to re-heat your HOT CROSS BUNS . . . no matter how good, a hot cross bun tastes better when it's hot.

Place buns on a trivet or cake rack over a small amount of water in an uncovered skillet or frying pan. The water of course must not come in contact with the buns. Heat the water until it is just simmering. In this way the icing will be preserved and the buns piping hot in five minutes . . . ready for instant serving.

This was the Simple Life

By
J. BLANCHE HERN

Every era has its compensations. It may be, that in years gone by, the farmers did do their work the "hard way" as it is referred to today, but for those persons there are many happy memories.

Work gave a quiet sense of achievement in seeing the farm, and farm animals well cared for, and having a cellar with an abundance of fruit and vegetables in anticipation of the long months of winter. There was a contentment and peace of mind which comes only from work well done, and farming was looked upon as a "good life."

A farm house during a winter afternoon had an indescribable quiet. There was not a sound, save the purring of a lazy old cat, curled up in its favorite chair, and the occasional crackle of burning wood in the kitchen range.

The farm collie lying on a mat near the door was listening for the first sound of invasion, when the quiet would be broken by the children returning from school. Then the old house seemed to shake off its complacency and steady itself for the onslaught.

As each member rushed in, there was talking and laughter, and arguments as well, as they made a mad scramble to change into their work clothes and, after a raid on the pantry cupboard, each to his task. One must fill the woodbox with sticks from the shed and go to the well for water. Others helped at the barn; feeding the livestock and bedding them down with clean straw for the cold winter night, and then help with the milking.

One sat down on a three-legged stool on the right side of a cow with a pail firmly held between the knees, and brought the milk out by hand. With harmony between the milker, the rhythm of the milk streaming into the pail was like a melody. After putting the milk through a hand turned cream separator, the chores were finished and it was time to go to the house for supper.

How pleasant it was, after being out in the frosty air, to go into a warm kitchen, softly lighted by coal oil lamps, to find on the old wood burning stove, a bubbling pot of beans, flavored by home cured ham. There would be a great pan of hot biscuits, fresh from the oven, waiting to be piled high with honey, gathered by the bees from the fields of clover and buckwheat. And there were cider, applesauce and all the good wholesome food the farm provided.

After the children had helped with the dishes and put the kitchen in order, it was time for the homework. The book bags were brought out, and the children gathered round the table, on which there was a huge dish of apples, for munching during the study hour.

Father and mother sat in their easy chairs, reading the evening papers. Mother's interests were only to glance through; to read of the weddings, or who had a new baby, or perhaps a tempting new recipe, before taking up her ever flowing basket of mending. Father on the other hand, mumbled to himself, "My—My—, what ever is this younger generation coming to."

The homework finished, father and mother joined the children at the table for a game, or read a book aloud, continuing the story from evening to evening with speculation on what would happen in the next chapter. The old clock on the mantel ticked away the happy hours and soon it was bedtime for the children.

When they were scrubbed, their prayers said, mother tucked them in their warm beds. Life was uncomplicated. And there was space and time to grow in.

Mrs. Blanche Hern was born in Nanaimo in 1892, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Schisler, at a time when farming was what is now called primitive.

Coal was the mainspring of Nanaimo's life in those days, but Mrs. Hern recalls very little about that industry or its people.

"We were farming people," she explains.

Still a child, she moved with her family to Ontario, and it was of the Niagara peninsula's history that she commenced writing.

She has recently been visiting her daughter, Mrs. R. C. McKenzie in Victoria, and, she says, "the grandeur of this western country has not changed — except that now, with the good roads that have spread across the country people can see it."

For Katherine Porter's New Book

PUBLIC is EAGER

It is doubtful whether any first novel has ever been awaited with such eagerness and impatience as Ship of Fools by Katherine Anne Porter which was released in Canada in April by Little, Brown (Canada).

The mere fact of the delivery of the manuscript to Atlantic-Little, Brown, the American publishers, last summer sparked off stories in newspapers and magazines throughout the English-speaking world.

Despite the slimness of her output—her reputation rests on three short books, Flowering Judas, The Leaning Tower and Pale Horse, Pale Rider, Katherine Anne Porter has become firmly established as one of the finest writers in the world today.

Unlike her previous short works, Ship of Fools is a novel on the grand scale, and its endless variety of scenes and characters is the variety of life itself. Comedy and tragedy, love and death, boredom and adventure, pain and pleasure all are witnessed in the lives and actions of the ship's company of the German passenger - freighter Vera, on a 27-day crossing from Vera Cruz, Mexico, to Bremerhaven, Germany, in 1931.

Katherine Anne Porter first began her novel over 20 years ago. During the intervening years she has re-written it to produce what has already been hailed by advance readers as an unforgettable work which will take a permanent place in the literature of our time.

Books for Young People

SIXTEEN AND OTHER STORIES. By Maureen Daly. Decorations by Kendall Rossi. Dodd, Mead. 187 pp. $3.00. Maureen Daly has written quite a number of books but "Seventeenth Summer" is probably the one that will always be most closely associated with her name. Here she uses the title of her first story, Sixteen, written at that age, for a collection that will be most welcome. Inevitably the stories are uneven, but the titles will call the teenage reader into the book: The Love Letters, You Can't Kiss Caroline, Love Is a Summer Word—the latter taken from Seventeenth Summer. All show an understanding of young people that is rather rare. Ages 13-16.

HALYCON: A Lady wi

As well as being a moving spirit in the local Thermopylae club, rallying point for the reef and splice brotherhood, 75-year-old Victoria-born Maxie Lohbrunner is a sort of self-appointed "Keeper of the Harbor Ghosts." For years now he has lived a bachelor existence on his boat moored alongside a lonely junk-cluttered wharf, between the Johnson Street Bridge and the Capitol Iron Works.

By CECIL CLARK

Mr. Clark retired as assistant commissioner of the old B.C. Provincial Police at the time of its disbandment and the assumption of provincial responsibilities by the RCMP.

Maxie has a right to summon the watch below; technically he's the last of the old-time sealers still afloat. He was just young enough to get in at the tail end of that fabulous 20-year era, halted by international agreement 50 years ago.

Maxie, I guess, has always been around the waterfront, from his earliest school days when he puttered around the harbor in leaky, flat-bottomed skiffs and dugout canoes. At 14, he once told me, he watched little Jack Voss put the finishing touches to the Tillikum before that diminutive Store Street hotelman took off on his epic 40,000-mile journey.

At 19, Maxie was on the books of a sealing schooner as a hunter, and saw blue water from the Mexican coast to Bering Strait, not to speak of the rock-bound coast of Siberia and the sights and sounds of Hakodate, Japan.

Now he's harbor-bound, but in these spring mornings as his abode occasionally rocks to the wash of a passing vessel, he probably thinks of refit time; the spring overhaul when scores of schooners moored above the Johnson Street Bridge were alive with activity -- ships with familiar names, like Ainoku, Director, Annie Paint, Carlotta Cox, Mary Ellen, the Pathfinder and the Surprise.

None of their voyages to the far-away Aleutians were what you would call humdrum, and most of these 70-foot 70-tonners had a story to tell. Like the Casco, formerly owned by Robert Louis Stevenson, or the Mary Ellen, skippered occasionally by "Sea Wolf" McLean, or the Vera, not only the fastest of all the great fleet, but also a lady with a past. A dark, mysterious past.

ORIGINALLY THE HALCYON, the Vera was built in Benicia, Calif., in 1886 as a yacht for California millionaire Harry Tevis. Sumptuously fitted out, she cost $25,000, which you can multiply by five to get today's value. Seventy-four feet long, she had a 21-foot beam, was eight foot five inches deep in the hold, and drew five feet at the forefoot. To the casual observer she always appeared to be a little deep in the water, but from the moment she slid down the ways, Halcyon's mould and design ringled her out as a craft with phenomenal sailing speed. According to no less authority than that famous team of nautical historians, Lewis and Dryden, in her day the Halcyon was the fastest ship of her size on the whole Pacific Ocean.

There's record of her once, under minimum sail, logging 329 sea miles in 21 hours, which figures at 13½ knots.

However, after a year of the fast-stepping Halcyon owner Tevis, apparently no blue water sailor, sold her to a man named Morrow for $6,000, who in turn sold her to Whalley and McLean. McLean dropped out but Whalley, backed by a Victoria syndicate, used her for running opium from Victoria to San Francisco, with occasional trips for a load from Hong Kong.

As an opium smuggler, in the late 80s, she carried a minimum crew of master, mate and four to six men. A legitimate sealer in those days carried about 15 hands. The Halcyon's crew, usually young and athletic, were always noted for being close-mouthed about their comings and goings. True, the small crew sometimes excited attention, but all enquiries were fended off.

IN THE STEALTHIEST CLOAK and dagger fashion the Halcyon arrived and departed in the days when Johnnie Cotsford, Jack Harvey, Dave Laing and others were her masters and mates. A veritable book could be written about their endless evasions of customs regulations, and, always "in ballast," she apparently toiled not, neither did she spin.

Poor old Milne, the local collector of customs, slapped several fines on the Halcyon for its wandering ways. Months out from California she'd drop in at Sooke. "Foo water," was one explanation. "Stress of weather" was worked to death by the California registered craft, and once her skipper made the claim that he was "out of charts."

Checking out from Victoria on one trip, Milne asked Cottsford where he was headed.

"The North Pacific" was the cryptic reply.

"To do what?"

"Hunting."

"Hunting what?"

"Ducks!"

WITH GOVERNMENT LICENSED OPIUM factories busily refining the raw product in Victoria, the Halcyon's load was usually taken by small boat to some out-of-the-way spot. Once a wagon took a load to Whiffin's Spit, where under guard of a lone camper additional loads built up a stack of boxes that would have made a member of today's drug squad gasp with astonishment. The load the Halcyon eventually took from Sooke was 4,656 pounds (over two and a quarter tons!) bought for $7 a pound in Victoria and sold for double that in California.

Those were Adventurous and Reckless Days when the Sealing Fleet lay moored in the Upper Harbor and Stealthy Crews went about their Business in the Dark of the Night.

Down south they'd drop anchor in Drake's Bay, north of San Francisco, lighter the load ashore, then bury it in a Chinese vegetable garden. Later it would be picked up by wagon to find its way to San Francisco's Chinatown.

Sometimes the outgoing load would be accumulated on Hill Island off Sidney, and once I know they used Prevost Island near Active Pass.

There was a nip and tuck experience when once the Halcyon picked up a few Indian hands at Dodger's Cove. The Indians were suspicious, because of the high wages ($40 a month), then wanted to know what all the four-gallon cans were for.

However, once out to sea, the Halcyon set

Fastest Thing Afloat on the Pacific

ly with a Shady Past

course for Drake's Bay where, as soon as they anchored, the skipper went ashore to make connections, taking one of the Indians with him—an Indian who happened to be a chief's son.

THERE WAS SOME SORT OF SLIP UP although the cargo apparently was landed, as Cotsford and his Indian took the San Bruno Road to go right in to San Francisco. For a week the Halcyon hung around. Then Laing, the mate, figuring he was exciting too much attention, took off. When the skipper came back to find his ship gone, he and the Indian returned to San Francisco and took the mail steamer to Victoria.

Meantime, back at Dodger's Cove, when the Halcyon's Indian crew had been put ashore, the chief naturally wanted to know where his son was. Unable to make head or tail of Laing's cryptic explanation, he got the idea his son had been done away with. Nothing would do but he must go right down to Victoria and report the matter to the police, so he set off in a sailing canoe with a companion. Luckily in the meantime Cotsford and the Indian lad arrived at Victoria by steamer and with the happy reunion of father and son, the danger was over. If Milne had heard the story of the voyage, he'd of course tip off the California customs.

There were times, they say, when the massive loads of the Halcyon taxed the resources of all Victoria's five opium factories. One, the Tai Yune, was between Pandora and Cormorant, on the east side of Government. Years ago you could still see the bars on the windows on the Cormorant Street side. Maybe they're there still.

THERE WERE TIMES of course when there were hitches in the Halcyon's little undercover exploits. Two of these turned out mightily costly.

One occurred in the fall of 1880 when the Halcyon, loaded with $50,000 worth of opium from Hong Kong, ran into a typhoon and piled up on a desolate part of the Japanese coast. So desolate that the villagers had never seen an Occidental before. The salvage job was intricate and costly, but that wasn't all. The local authorities seized the opium!

After that exploit the Halcyon, back in Victoria, lay for months moored in the upper harbor, her only occupants a husky watchman, short on speech, and his mastiff dog, long on teeth!

Came a spring day in 1892 when there was again the bustle of preparation aboard the Halcyon. She was soon off again, this time for the usual "North Pacific" (which didn't mean a thing) with another $50,000 in opium put up by the Victoria syndicate.

Descendants in town today would be surprised if I mentioned names!

Fast-talking Mr. Whalley was aboard as agent, and after a speedy voyage over three tons of opium was picked up at Macao at around $7.50 a pound, and weeks later the Halcyon put in at Honolulu.

Although at the time there was a lot of indentured Chinese coolie labor working in the Hawaiian cane fields, it's a cinch they wouldn't be getting away with three tons of "yen."

WHALLEY WAS NOW INSPIRED to strike out for himself. He went ashore and there's no doubt he acted as middleman in another trans-Pacific deal. Anyway he sent back word to have the contraband put ashore at night on a lonely beach. After that he hung around Honolulu's best hotel, while the crew, forbidden to go ashore, kept wondering when they were leaving. Messages were sent to Whalley to hurry up. Then one day the mate went ashore to personally stress the need for an early departure.

To his surprise he found no sign of Whalley. Mr. Whalley had left two days before on a passenger ship that touched briefly, was gone with all the cash!

There was no cable or wireless to catch up with him, but it seems he had headed for Manila (now occupied by U.S. troops) where he invested in a combined hotel, cabaret and bar.

"Whalley's Mile Long Bar" fronted on the Pasig River. For those with an itch for action there were dice, cards or roulette in back rooms.

Whalley eventually fell victim to his own layout, gambled most of his money away, and in a year or two was broke. Came a night when he was actually tossed out of the hotel he once owned! There was a U.S. Army rule in those days that those down on their luck couldn't stick around; Whalley was shipped back to San Francisco in the U.S. Transport Thomas. In mid-ocean he died of Bright's disease and was buried at sea.

After Whalley's Honolulu defection, the Halcyon came back to Victoria, and in November, 1892, was sold to E. B. Marvin for $2,500—just 10 per cent of her construction cost.

SHE CHANGED HER NAME to Vera and became respectable, this swift schooner well-known half a century ago along the whole Pacific coast.

ONE PROBLEM THAT CLUNG to the swift ex-smuggler was her name; a name that caused every customs man on the coast to prick up his ears when he heard it. Marvin made the schooner an honest woman, re-naming her Vera. If Halcyon hinted of kingfishers, who can take to flight or take a plunge as occasion warrants, Vera stood for truth. It was time she settled down.

The years rolled on, and the Vera had a succession of masters in the sealing game. In 1897 W. T. Bragg had her out and came back minus three men. One fell off a main boom, and a couple drowned when a returning boat capsized alongside, while the cook tried to poison himself by drinking acid. Apart from this the trip was uneventful.

Other skippers in turn were Matt Ryan, C. O. Burns, Frank Muhrer, Albert C. Folger, and finally in 1904, A. K. St. Clair. He took her out in 1905 and again in 1906.

They made an early start that year, toward the end of January. Not unusually, half a dozen of the crew failed to turn up, but finally he had his complement of about five hunters and ten boat pullers. Ed Anderson was mate, Jack McGill second mate. D. Mills was on the books as cabin boy. The name of one of the hunters on that trip has a familiar ring; 19-year-old Maxie Lohbrunner.

They were back at Point Ellice on October 24 with 620 skins.

Today, at 75, Maxie, as I said before, is keeper of the harbor ghosts, a job he combines with his simple housekeeping alongside a lonely wharf near the Johnson Street Bridge. I can imagine that when he looks hard through the low-lying mist these spring mornings he glimpses again the forest of masts up near the VMD; perhaps at dusk he hears the laughter and thump of feet as a boatload of invisible seal hunters ties up alongside of him, to rattle up the wharf heading for the swinging doors of the Lighthouse on Store Street, or maybe the Caledonia or the Queens.

If he looks hard in the half-light, out in the stream, moored apart from other craft, maybe he can just make out the shadow of a military ghost ship. Shrouded in mystery, not a light showing, she's the Halcyon—fastest schooner on the Pacific Ocean!

TAKE A TRAVEL TIP FROM AN ELDER

I've never felt the slightest desire to travel by air, but—last summer—because of the time-saving element, decided to fly by jet to Britain.

BRITAIN REVISITED

By Jet, By Jiminy!

DOROTHEA MITCHELL

Two things relieved the monotony of the blinding sunshine on clouds. One was my seat-companion, a most entertaining, widely-travelled man, a well-known Victoria realtor; the other was learning from time to time, of our flying altitudes and speeds. Nearing Goose Bay, Labrador, for instance, we were skimming along at a height of 35,000 feet (nearly six miles) and doing 630 miles an hour. The outdoor temperature, at that elevation, was 62 degrees below zero.

And at both Edmonton and Winnipeg, where we had touched down, it had been 80 degrees in the shade!

Crossing the Atlantic, it would have been possible to sleep had not fellow passengers talked at the top of their voices.

During a 10-week somewhat hectic dash around England, Scotland and Wales, I seemed to be eternally going up or down. Hills, hills and steps everywhere. When in Edinburgh — quite apart from the usual sight-seeing—I climbed endless steps and stairs, many of them stone. In one instance, there were 64 stairs of the "unbending" variety, worn hollow in the centre.

In common with every first-timer, I was fascinated by this wonderful old city. The same may be said of the less-known town of Montrose Angus; of special interest to me—as the olden-days home of my father, grandfather and great-grandfather. I spent nearly a week tramping around—on flagg- and cobblestones — "researching" for additional facts regarding their by-gone history; and nearly everyone who might have been helpful was away on vacation! Knowing that registration of births, deaths and marriages was not compulsory in Scotland prior to 1855, it was quite a thrill to find a number of family entries between the years 1838 and 1846. One which amused me was my grandparents' "proclamation of marriage" (equivalent to our publication of banns) in 1840.

The academy (high school, to us) was built in 1815 and still stands, though enormously enlarged. We had always known that my grandfather had been rector (or principal) of this institution, but have since learned—through correspondence with a man writing its history—that in those early days, each teacher paid a fee to the Town Council for the use of a class-room, and collected fees from his pupils.

I attended Sunday morning service at the Auld Kirk, where all the family had worshipped, and was disgusted to find the interior ultra modern!—everything in light oak, instead of the quaint, almost black, square box-pews described by my father, and of which I later unearthed an engraving at the Montrose Museum. Originally, there were three galleries, one above the other; it is now said this is the only church in Scotlannd with even two.

In my meanderings, it was sometimes necessary to ask directions. Some responses were a trifle puzzling. "Weel, ye go by two spaces and then—about seven yards further—ye'll come to a close. That's it!"

"Space" I rightly interpreted as a side-street; "close" was a narrow, tunnelled passage between two stores (pardon me, shops!); and at the far end of it was the office of the town's leading newspaper. From the editor of the Review I obtained some helpful information.

While searching the graveyard of the Auld Kirk, one stone stood out as unique. In rather crude lettering are the words—"This lot and stone belong to John Walker." No date has been added, though the head-stone is crumbling with age.

Back in Staffordshire, my hostess of the time and several of her friends chartred a special coach for a trip to Llandidno, Wales (a place I had not visited since I was six weeks old) and being 115 miles from Wolverhampton—we had to start early. During the afternoon, sitting at the end of the pier, we gazed up at the beautiful Happy Valley Gardens, a mass of blossoms, high on a near-by hill. I managed the steep ascent. In addition to the spectacular display of flowers and shrubs, an out-door variety entertainment was in progress. Just one performance was worth that climb! An armless man, seated on a high stool, not only shaved a member of the audience with his feet, using a blade-razor, but gave a brilliant performance on the piano.

The greatest highlight, perhaps, of the whole tour was being able to locate and see three old friends with whom I had not been in touch for many years—two since 1897 (one of them now 94 years old), the other since 1901. And besides the relatives and friends I had already planned to stay with, managed to see four families—friends of Victorians—who were eager for first-hand news. A fifth, an old lady of 85, was not "contactable," because she was dashing around the country in madder fashion than I! One of these day-trips was to Ilford, Essex, about 15 miles from London. It was arranged that I travel by Tube, telephoning as soon as I arrived and they would come to the station to meet me.

And this constituted my "depth" in transportation. Leaving by Tottenham Court Tube Station, there were first three long flights of stairs to the ticket-office. (This, incidentally, was the last sign of any tube personnel in the place.) From that point, descent was by escalator which appeared a quarter of a mile long! At any rate, I'm certain it equalled all the Hudson's Bay escalators placed end for end. Then came passages running in various directions, and by good luck I struck the right one. It was a surprise to see quite a station down there, with numerous platforms and tracks; in the old days, I recollected only one. Also, as we proceeded on the half-hour run, came the realization of how high above sea-level London stands; for after the terrific descent to Tube level in the heart of the city, we were before long running through flat, open country; then tunnel into a hill again.

Tremendous changes have, naturally, taken place since 1950, when rationing was still in force, the greatest being traffic. It seems that everyone is working, and practically everone has a car. Traffic signals are much the same as in Victoria, and are obeyed by drivers. But pedestians! Almost invariably, while the "wait" sign is showing, people scramble through between slowly moving vehicles or take a chance on beating a fast-coming one. Frequently I found myself the only person left on the curb when the "go" sign showed. I'd been well trained in Victoria!

Another thing which strikes one forcibly is the craze for gay-colored front doors (all shades of the rainbow and then some) on small houses and cottages — even the shabbiest all over the country. In many instances, an awning-stripe curtain hangs over the door. My thought was, "what an excellent idea! They can leave the door open for ventilation and still have privacy." Finally, being of an enquiring nature, I plucked up courage to ask the reason.

"Oh," said the owner proudly, "that's to protect the paint! You see, the sun would blister it otherwise." I refrained from the suggestion it must be poor quality paint.

Decidedly obvious in many cities and towns was the prevalence of wine and spirit stores—at least in the proportion of three to one drug-store. Yet, in spite of this, I saw not one instance of drunkenness or rowdyism in such big cities as London, Leeds or Edinburgh, even when walking back to my hotel (fairly late) from theatre, bus-stop or station.

Apart from the somewhat stormy return flight, I "came to earth" in Victoria with a bit of a jar. The British Columbia government had taken over the B.C. Electric services, and—without consulting me!—were discontinuing all bus-service on Begbie. That afternoon, I wended my way to the Oak Bay Junction Safeway store for very essential supplies and was faced with a large sign, "Closed Permanently." I felt completely let down. The neighborhood did not want me any more.

The only redeeming "up" immediately following my return home was being told by my bank that U.S. funds (which comprise a portion of my income) had become, during my absence—subject to premium instead of discount!

"JUST A SECOND"

"I can easily explain this coat, Mum. Where your flat is overrun with mice — mine, in London, is overrun with mink."

Gold Fever Brought to Other Men Than Miners

DEATH and DESPAIR

In Victoria's Early Days

A scandal shook little Victoria in April, 1862, and because a good many men lost a good deal of money in the matter there was an outcry against the perpetrator of the fraud, a buckling on of guns, and a manhunt of considerable proportion and vast enthusiasm.

CENTENARY FLASHBACKS
By JOHN SHAW, Editor, The Islander

The hunted man was 25-year-old Aime Marchand, a Belgian assayer and banker of sorts.

He was ultimately captured, weeping and inarticulate, and sent to prison. But for days The Daily British Colonist kept the story alive while the hunt and trial proceeded.

Poor Marchand! He was ambitious. He may have been a scoundrel . . . certainly he was in the eyes of his fellow colonists. But the chances are he was just less dexterous in the manipulation of finances than men who made a success of their opportunities in the same business.

His story of failure is really no less tragic than that of men, hundreds of them, who lost their lives on the trails and waterways in the passionate search for gold a century ago.

"The whole town yesterday was talking about the Marchand embezzlements. New victims turned up on every street corner and the total amount of the fraud will not fall far short of $10,000.

"Messrs. Sporborg and Goldstone offer a reward of $100 for information which may lead to the runaway's arrest . . ."

So now it was known in old Victoria what prompted the advertisement by Sporborg and Goldstone offering the $100 reward for Aime Marchand Jr.'s arrest.

The man had been in business as an assayer in the town for three years, and after he had disappeared on Saturday, April 5, associates who had been victimized joined police in an angry manhunt.

Every corner of the community was searched, every [illegible] and roominghouse, and every ship in port. But Marchand had vanished. There wasn't a trace.

Sporborg and Goldstone, incidentally, were among the big losers to this rogue. They had left with him about $1,000 in gold dust for assay. Their poke was among the several which Marchand carried away with him.

Another $1,000 deposited with the absconder by two Cariboo miners was also missing.

The French consul was bilked of $1,000 and two California gentlemen claimed to have lost a like sum.

Altogether $10,000 was probably an under estimation of the townspeople's loss.

He never drank or gambled, and he apparently had sound connections with California banks. So he was trusted.

Just before he fled, the young man borrowed a least $1,000 from a friend.

It was thought he had taken a canoe from the shore at Beacon Hill at dusk on Saturday, probably manned by Indians, and paddled to the Washington side.

Then, two days later, came a young man named Harvey, son-in-law of J. E. Robertson, with whom Marchand had boarded for three years. For a consideration, said Harvey—$500 in fact—he would disclose the hiding-place of his erstwhile friend.

Police found the young man in a state of near collapse on the Robertson farm in Cowichan. He was escorted to Victoria and brought weeping into court next day.

One of his last tricks was performed in this fashion: He would rush into a business establishment with a gold bar and ask for a loan in coin. With the gold coins in his pocket he would trot away, but in a few minutes he would return and demand his gold bar back. Why? To put an identification mark on it.

Astonishingly enough he got away from two establishments in this way, promising to return within a few minutes, and with his gold bar still in his hands and his pockets full of sovereigns and of double eagles.

A third party was suspicious . . . or cautious, at least . . . and wouldn't surrender the coin unless he kept possession of the bar.

Marchand didn't quibble. He took his coin and departed—straight for the Dallas waterfront and faraway places. Or so Everybody believed.

"He hadn't a cent," he told Amor de Cosmos of The Daily British Colonist, who visited him in his cell.

Shame was young Marchand's worst punishment.

Committed for trial by Magistrate Augustus Pemberton, he went back to his cell to wait for the assizes and the certainty of prison for his crime.

* * *

M. MUNRO WAS ARRAIGNED in police court on the same day that Marchand came before the magistrate. He was charged with "fast driving" over the new bridge at Johnson Street.

Riders were supposed to walk their horses.

But Munro had a good excuse. The Scot explained he saw ahead of him a young man he thought he recognized as Marchand. And Marchand, it seemed, owed him $100. So he spurred his mount and drove after the suspect with a shout.

Munro was mistaken in his identification, but his excuse was considered valid.

Not so William Jackson's. The colored teamster drove over the bridge with a trotting team hauling his wagon. Ignorance of the law cost him 20 shillings.

ADVERTISEMENTS appearing in The Daily British Colonist during mid-April of 1862 were as good an indication of the spirit and enthusiasm of the times as anything else.

Clarence Oppenheimer was calling for 1,000 men to join his work force in the building of a wagon road from Yale to the Cariboo.

He announced that sub-contracts would shortly be let for large and small sections.

At the same time 300 men were wanted for the wagon road from Boston Bar to Lytton . . . "to be paid in cash monthly on the road if desired."

Men could sign on at Hope, Lytton or Yale.

On the wagon road project from Lytton to Mud Lake another 500 men were wanted.

"None will be hired for a period less than two months. If they wish they can engage until the full completion of the road. Wages will be paid in cash . . ."

Buoyant, boisterous days!

RAIL MILESTONES ON TWO ISSUES

BY MILTON CROENBURG

Topical collectors will be interested in an unusual coincidence resulting in the release of commemorative stamps from both Pakistan and Finland celebrating the centenary of railways established in their respective countries.

The first track was laid in what is now Pakistan on May 13, 1861 between Karachi and Kotri. The 13 paisa stamp printed in yellow, black and green shows the Eagle type locomotive in use on the Scinde Punjab and Delhi Railway in the 1860s. The figure "1861" in the background is formed by rail tracks.

There are two rail lines in Pakistan today, the Western Railway, a good broad gauge network totalling 5,327 miles and the Eastern Railway of 1,712 miles with broad and metre gauge. Both railways are spread over 364,737 square miles, separated by 1,200 miles of Indian territory.

The first railway line in Finland was begun in 1860 between Helsinki and Hameelinna. The 10 markka green stamp features the first Finnish engine "Ilmarinen" used on the rail-line.

The gradual growth of the line over the years is indicated by the 30 markka purple value, showing a large steam engine and an open freight car carrying lumber.

Like most rail lines throughout the world, Finland's railway, government owned, has been rapidly changing to diesel engines and the new equipment is shown on the 40 markka brown value, with streamlined passenger cars in the background.

There are now more than 3,000 miles of line, all broad gauge, in Finland and the railway is linked with Sweden across the Tornea River and with the USSR in Karelia, where there are two main routes to Leningrad.

Private Owners Hope to Preserve

CRAIGFLOWER MANOR,

Showplace of the Colony

A short time ago Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Thompson and their sons, formerly of Calgary, Alta., and Kimberley, B.C., moved to Victoria.

Mrs. Thompson is daughter of a doctor who moved from Missouri to Alberta around the turn of the century. Instead of practising medicine, he took up dairy farming and purchased a big rambling house that was already about 30 years old. Here his family lived and grew up.

In an article about the McKenzie family and Craigflower Manor in THE COLONIST of March 8, 1925, N. de Bertrand Lugrin said that the country was to preserve the Manor "for all time."

In the fall of 1961, in another article in THE COLONIST, James Nesbitt said that the Manor was in imminent danger of being torn down. Just what happened to the plans to preserve the Manor is anybody's guess. At any rate, the Manor has now received a new lease on life—a ten-year lease.

Dr. Hays' son is now the Mayor of Calgary and he still lives in the old home, though his father moved to the Palliser Hotel some 13 years ago when Mrs. Hays died. Mayor Hays owns a dairy farm and keeps farm hours. He has his own way of getting even with people who make telephone calls after midnight. He calls them around 5 a.m. when he gets to the office.

As a result of her upbringing, Mrs. Thompson loves big, old houses with high ceilings. Like a lot of people she actually suffers in the cramped, modern houses with low ceilings. So when the family started looking for a home in Victoria they told the agent what they wanted and their search led them to Craigflower Manor. The family promptly fell in love with the place and wanted to buy it; but there were legal technicalities and the best they could do was get a 10-year lease.

Craigflower Manor is situated in View Royal, which is unorganized territory and under the jurisdiction of the provincial government. During the last few years, all the land surrounding the Manor has been sold, till the Manor itself has only about a quarter of an acre left, and that has no legal access to either Admirals Road, the Island Highway or the waterfront. Mr. Johnston, who owns the Captain Discovery Motel, also owns Craigflower Manor, and he was willing to let the Thompsons have the use of his access road but not to buy it, because his motel would then be cut off.

The same access problem exists on the Island Highway. An oil company has bought the property for a service station but can't get both an "in" and an "out" driveway, so nothing has been done with the property.

The imposing Manor gateway still stands but the Manor itself has no right to use it and the last of the beautiful Lombardy poplars that used to line the highway have recently been cut down.

Despite the fact that they have only a 10-year lease on the property and they could be completely cut off without co-operation from owner of the Captain Discovery Motel, Mr. and Mrs. Thompson are spending thousands of dollars to renovate the place and intend to use it both as a home and a museum.

They found the house very cold, so they have installed an electric panel heating system. It is ideal for the place, for the panelling doesn't show and the warmth seems to be coming from the open fire and the sun streaming through the tall windows.

There was some antique furniture in the Manor when the Thompsons leased it, so they bought that and Mrs. Thompson has been buying more as the opportunity arises. She doesn't pretend that all the furniture belonged to the McKenzies, but tries to get things as close to that period as possible.

Unfortunately, she has already found that the price goes up as soon as people know what she wants it for.

She was fortunate enough to find an old settee and chairs that were so dilapidated she got the set very reasonably. She had the set repaired and reupholstered in some beautiful plum-covered plush she found in the Salvation Army depot in Vancouver and the result is lovely to behold, and furthermore, comfortable to sit on. The draperies are gold colored and are also old material and tone in most beautifully with the new apple-green striped wallpaper.

THIS IS THE NEW AND CHARMING chatelaine of Craigflower Manor, Mrs. G. A. Thompson.

Mrs. Tompson is following Mrs. McKenzie's example in having Indian women help her. A woman from the Songhees' reserve is acting as housekeeper so Mrs. Thompson can concentrate on the renovating of the house and Mrs. Frank Albany, a most capable seamstress, is making all the curtains and draperies.

Mrs. McKenzie brought maids out from Scotland with her. Women were so scarce in the ten-year-old settlement that they quickly found husbands and Mrs. McKenzie turned to the Indians for help. She had two girls named Polly and Lucy, daughters of the chief but by different mothers. Each thought she was superior and Polly became sure of it when a parrot which had been given to the family by a visiting Royal Navy officer called out "Pretty Polly! Pretty Polly! Pretty Polly!"

When the Puget Sound Agricultural Company, a subsidiary of the Hudson's Bay Co., decided that their new settlement at Fort Victoria needed a farming community to feed it, they recruited volunteer settlers in Scotland. Kenneth McKenzie was to head the community and carpenters, bricklayers and oother artisans and farmers were all brought along. The ship they canme in, the Norman Morison, landed at Fort Victoria and found that nothing had been prepared for them. The family of eight had to spend the rest of the winter in a loft, with only the carpets they had brought with them to act as partitions.

A portable sawmill had been brought in the ship and some of the men started to clear land and build shacks for themselves and in the spring they started to build the Manor House.

Glass for the windows and the big brass-studded front door, with its lock and hinges, were all the things that were brought from Scotland. Everything else was made on the spot — including the bricks for the chimneys and fireplaces.

While out walking one day, Mr. McKenzie discovered a deposit of limestone on what is now Hemicken Road and this was used to make the plaster. The men did such a good job that the paperhangers now redecorating the house say they haven't had to do any patching except in a few places upstairs where the roof had leaked.

The banisters were made of arbutus wood, pegged.

We can only imagine how pleased the McKenzies were to move into their new home, after the uncomfortable winter in the loft. Several families lived in the home at first till more houses could be built and all used the big community kitchen, doing their cooking in the huge open fireplace.

When the McKenzies and their growing family — for three more children were born after their arrival he — finally had their home to themselves, it became the centre of hospitality for the whole district.

AGNES CARNE TATE

This is a legend of the Nitinats, as told to Margaret Williams by Jane Tate, and illustrated by the celebrated Arthur Pitts

CURSE of the DOG

When she was 17 Jane married a man of the Nitinat tribe at Clo-oose, 30 miles beyond Port Renfrew, on Vancouver Island. She lived with her husband, Henry Tate, a descendent of the great chief Maquinna, for 20 years, and she became the mother of 10 children, six daughters and four sons. Five of the children are now at the Alberni Indian Residential School, a married daughter lives at Ucluelet, and the others are with Jane on the Songhees reserve at Craigflower.

This is a legend of the Nitinat that Jane told me in her soft and pleasing voice:

There was once a young man, the son of a chief. He was a lazy boy, and neither fished nor hunted as did the others of the village. His only pastime was teasing the dogs. Always he set one against the other, and the air was filled with the sound of snarling and fighting animals. His father said "Go out, and be with the young men," but the boy never heeded him.

Early one morning, as day was breaking, the boy heard a knocking on the wall near his bed, and a voice said, "Come out, we want to see you." Never before had anyone called him in this way, so he left his bed and went outside into the grey dawn. He saw the figure of a man walking slowly from the village towards the long beach and the boy followed him and came on a crowd of young men sitting on logs on the shore.

"Sit there," said the man, "do not come close to us." Another spoke up, saying, "Look at us now, see the scars on our bodies, look at our torn ears. We cannot heal our bodies because you have us fighting always and growling at one another. We are the dogs, we are the ones that you torture. We want you, now, to leave us in peace. We have had enough, because we too have feelings, and we are one family, like you. You can go home now."

As the boy turned to go another rose and threw a dog pelt over him and suddenly he was walking on all fours like a dog, and he was a dog.

He went home to his father's house and lay on his own bed and at daylight his father rose and made a fire and said to his wife "I wonder where our son is? Only his dog is here and I have not known him to go out so early before."

"They threw a dog pelt over him and suddenly the boy was walking on all fours, like a dog . . ."

Jane Tate was born Jane Bob, in 1918, in Esquimalt, where the fish cannery once stood. Her father came from the Cole Bay reserve, but she came to live at the Songhees reserve as a girl and attended the Songhees school.

"Seeka! Seeka!" she cried, which means "Get out! Get out!" and when the dog went out into the village all the other dogs attacked him. When the chief and his wife had their meal the dog tried to take his place and eat with them. In his own mind, you see, he was a man.

In time the men of the village realized that this was no dog, but was the Chief's son. They were afraid of the evil that had befallen them and decided to leave the village, so they took the old people and the children and moved away. The mother cried for her son and four of the young braves said "We will get hold of this dog and find if it is really a boy"

The four braves went up into the mountains, away from all the people. Every day they bathed in the flowing water of the river and every day they took herbs to purify themselves. They came down on the fourth day and crept to the beach where the dog was. They saw a young man bathing in the salt water, and he had no pelt. He scented the coming of the braves and all they saw then was a dog running off into the bushes.

"We are not yet pure," said the braves. "We will return to the mountains. We will go back to the river."

The second time they returned to the shore they came closer to the boy, but again he scented them, and disappeared in the form of a dog. Four times in all the young men went into the mountains, and after the fourth time they managed to seize the boy as he bathed. Two of them burned the dog pelt while the boy crouched, crying, on the shore.

The braves brought him to his parents in the new village and said, "We have brought your son, and now you must be patient with him and gather herbs and purify him, in time it will be well with him."

The boy whimpered like a dog and the mother grieved and did her best for him, and one day the boy spoke. In the village the dogs were barking and the boy listened, and said, "There is someone coming to our village."

CRAIGFLOWER MANOR

Esquimalt was a Royal Navy base then and the officers of all the visiting ships used to be entertained at Craigflower Manor.

"They kept us civilized," said Miss Goodie McKenzie in later years. "Without them we should have gone completely wild."

And one can imagine what a haven of refuge the place must have seemed to the men after their weary months at sea on the Pacific station.

The place where the Craigflower Auto Court now stands used to be the site of the flour mill and the big brick bake oven. The bakers from the ships in Esquimalt used to bake bread there and carry it back along the trail to the ships. And what a treat that soft bread was in comparison to the sailors' usual "hardtack."

The McKenzie family were all of necessity good horsemen and Mrs. McKenzie often accompanied her husband on his trips to Victoria. Even today it is not hard to imagine how beautiful that woodland trail must have been with its glimpses through the trees of the shining waters of the Gorge.

One of the family possessions that has been preserved is Miss "Goodie" McKenzie's riding hat and case. (She acquired the nickname on the five-month voyage around the Horn and it stuck to her the rest of her life.)

Another little item that has come home is the gravy boat that belonged to the willow pattern dinner set that the McKenzies brought from Scotland with them. After the death of the last daughter in her home at Lake Hill, all the possessions were auctioned off. George Rogers, of Lake Hill, had known the family for so long that he bought the gravy boat as a keepsake and his daughter is now returning it. So, after nearly 100 years — for the McKenzies left Craigflower Manor for their 1,000 acre farm at Lake Hill in 1886 — the gravy boat has finally sailed home.

Mrs. Thompson would love to procure other articles that formerly belonged to the McKenzies but has no way of knowing where they are.

Mrs. Thompson has spent hours in the Archives hunting up everything she can find about the McKenzies so she will be a most interesting and efficient guide. She is so determined to be that she has even had a crinoline gown made for herself and wears it most gracefully. She says that everything she has read has convinced her that the McKenzies kept a lovely and gracious home and that is what she wants Craigflower Manor to be once again.

I visited the Manor when it was just a museum, dead and lifeless, and the change now, even with the house filled with workmen, is almost startling. It is alive again.

Mrs. Thompson said that the repairs they have made to the place should make it last another 100 years at least, and public pressure should be brought to bear to see that the place has that chance to survive.

His Brother Takes a Last Look at Hemingway and

'THE GIFT of DEATH'

By JOHN BARKHAM

No, this is not a quickie tossed off by brother Leicester after Ernest Hemingway's death. It has been in work for three years, and Ernest knew about it. Leicester quotes him as saying: "Someday I'd like to have somebody who really knew me write a book about me—maybe you'll be the one."

Leicester Hemingway has proved to be the one, though he will assuredly not be the only one. This is merely the first of many books to be written about the most individual American writer of the century. It is also the first I have come across which treats Ernest as a human being instead of a caricature or a legend.

Leicester—sometime novelist, newspaperman, and authentic Hemingway—has painted a family portrait of his brother which Ernest would have approved. Leicester is not an "arty" writer, but he has a directness that is appropriate here. As a book it is better in its parts than its sum, which is understandable when you remember how many-sided a man Ernest was. In areas where the brothers could function fraternally (as when they went hunting or fishing together), the book is vivid in its recall. Where Ernest worked alone (as he did when he was writing), Leicester stands on the outside looking in.

The book opens with a poignant description of the funeral in the shadow of the Idaho mountains last July, and then moves into a chronological biography. The early chapters on Ernest's boyhood, schooldays, and up to the first marriage and honeymoon in Europe are valuable revelations. Only a Hemingway could be as intimate as this. The perceptive reader will not fail to make the import of guns in Ernest's boyhood. His father taught him to love them, and by guns he lived and died.

ERNEST HEMINGWAY . . . an American legend.

MY BROTHER, ERNEST HEMINGWAY, by Leicester Hemingway. Cleveland: World Publishing Co. 283 pp. $4.95.

The artist in Ernest comes to Leicester only dimly and obliquely. Wisely, he makes no attempt to invent what he doesn't know himself. Ernest's salad days in Paris, his association with Gertrude Stein and her coterie are briefly recorded. Leicester wasn't there. He does, however, set down a blistering conversation with Ernest when his brother told off la Stein. "Gertrude was a fine woman till she went so completely queer."

The best chapters in the book are those in which Leicester goes hunting with Ernest in the North or fishing in the Caribbean. These remembrances are alive with movement, color, and authentic Hemingway talk. Future biographers will need these glimpses for a rounded portrait.

There isn't much on the declining years, when the brothers grew apart. The final pages make clear how far Ernest's health had deteriorated. The manner of his death may be an official mystery, but apparently not to Leicester—or, for that matter, to Hemingway readers.

"He, who had given what he once described as the gift of death to so many living creatures in his lifetime, loaded the weapon he held and then leaned forward as he placed the stock of his favorite shotgun on the floor of the foyer, and found a way to trip the cocked hammers of the gun."

Jack Douglas, Author of the Slick Snicker

The Man Can Laugh at Himself

Funnymen usually try to look like funnymen. Think of Bob Hope or Red Skelton or Wayne and Schuster and you'll see what I mean. Jack Douglas, however, is the most lugubrious-looking funnyman I have seen. Perhaps this is because his funny lines usually emerge from faces other than his own. As you may know, he has been a gag-writer for most of the top comics in the business.

There was a time, though, when he delivered his own lines, sang his own songs, and played his own drum. The going was apparently rough enough to leave a permanent imprint on his physiognomy. He describes the process, with characteristically grim witticism, in his snicker-along-with-me autobiography. Here's a sample, from the period when he played small joints near Hollywood: "You had to have the guts of General Patton and the hide of Tony Galento, plus the smile of Liberace. I had all three."

A FUNNY THING HAPPENED TO ME ON MY WAY TO THE GRAVE, by Jack Douglas. New York: E. P. Dutton and Co. 181 pp. $3.50.

Once Douglas became convinced he was not going to be propelled into Hollywood stardom he turned to writing for others. The list of comedians for whom he ground out gags reads like a roster of "show biz" greats. "Hope had an uncanny knack for picking writing talent, including myself. He always thought any sketch could be better. Sometimes he was right."

Douglas has a sardonic approach to glamor. Here's his picture of Betty Hutton in her dressing room at Las Vegas after her first performance. "She was inconsolable because three had been some restiveness in the audience. She should know there's no such thing as a perfect audience—except maybe at a lynching."

The book has a thin streak of chronological narrative running through it, but in general Douglas uses a few key places or events merely as pegs on which to hang a noose of anecdotes. His best are very funny, even when he uses the so-called "sick" style. Here's what he has to say about New York's Summer Festival. "It could mean that New York is a Summer Festival because the muggers wear sports clothes. Actually, New York is a Summer Festival like a Siberian salt mine is a Winter Festival."

One chapter in the book will make it a must for James Dean fans, whose devotion to their idol lingers on like that of a little old ladies for Rudolf Valentino. Douglas, a sports car fan himself, was one of the first persons on the scene when Dean was killed in a road accident, and he has a full account of it here. Dean was not speeding, avers Douglas. "Out there if you drive a sports car," he snorts, "they'll give you a ticket for backing up!"

That title—did it come before the book?

"Yes, it did," replied Douglas. "I thought of it in 1957, and it struck me as pretty funny for a book about myself. So I registered it with the Writers' Guild. You can't register a title with them, only a book manuscript. So I sent it along with some blank pages tied up like a bundle of manuscript."

Most people familiar with the Jack Douglas brand of humor think of him as a gagwriter for comedians. But he has also written two short books before this one, each rich in the type of tart, macabre humor he has made his own. The autobiography is the first full-length piece of writing he has yet published.

Had he found the going difficult?—"Yes, it was tough. I began the book last spring and didn't finish it till September. I tried to remember all the important things that had happened to me, but I'm sure as soon as the book is out people will start calling me to ask why I left out this or that episode."

Most gagwriters for comedians function on the "togetherness" principle in that they work in groups. Not so Jack Douglas. He has preferred to work alone, which is why the writing of books doesn't leave him feeling metaphorically naked. "In the old radio days," he recalled with a grin, "Bob Hope used to have two teams working for him in competition, and the writers used to count up the jokes each had in the monologues. Not for me, thanks." J. B.

AND A GENTLEMAN TO THE VERY END

EVELYN WAUGH . . .

THE END OF THE BATTLE, by Evelyn Waugh. Boston: Little, Brown. 319 pp. $4.50.

I shall never forget my first meeting with Evelyn Waugh some ten years ago. I had gone to interview him about his latest book, Helena, and he greeted me warmly with a copy in his hand. Waving me to a chair, he opened it at a marked passage and began to read in that cultivated, patrician tone of his. When he had finished, he looked up at me and said enthusiastically: "Wonderful stuff, isn't it?"

It was, too, but it was the source of the comment which surprised me. No false modesty about Evelyn Waugh. He is a writer's writer, and knows it. He commands a prose instrument of remarkable suppleness, with which he can have uproarious fun (as in his early comic novels). He can also use its fine cutting edge in satire (as in The Loved One), or can employ it seriously to glorify the things he believes in deeply — Catholicism and the aristocracy.

This new novel falls in the third category. It is the concluding volume in his fiction trilogy about The Second World War. (The earlier two were Men at Arms, in which Guy Crouchback enlists in the Halberdiers at the age 36, and Officers and Gentlemen, in which he is blooded in the African campaigns.) The End of the Battle we follow him into the Yugoslav partisan campaign (in which Waugh himself participated).

No one but Evelyn Waugh could have written the story this way, with its conscious emphasis on Catholicism, its strong overtones of irony, its occasional flashes of humor, its biting references to Americans. Several years ago Waugh promised that in his future books he would follow two aims — to write them as well as he could, and to represent man more fully, "which to me means only one thing, man in his relation to God."

This he achieves in Guy Crouchback, a genteel, world-weary member of an old English Catholic family. In this final novel we see Crouchback reacting to two different sets of circumstances — his reconciliation with his divorced wife, whom he remarries when she becomes pregnant by a man who has deserted her, and his war service behind the lines in Italy and Yugoslavia.

His motives and behavior are impeccably those of the well-bred, civilized Englishman. He has kindness and compassion, and his faith gives him an unshakable spiritual assurance. The lower orders are glimpsed only briefly, but vividly and wickedly, like "the drab, ill-favored adolescent girls" of London who entertain American soldiers in darkened doorways.

When Waugh is at his best the scenes are engraved on the reader's mind. The Catholic funeral service given Crouchback's father is pictured in elaborate, expert detail. So, in a very different way, is his account of a parachute jump: "He experienced rapture, something as near as his earth-bound soul could reach to a foretaste of paradise." (Note the spiritual terms in which Waugh describes a physical experience.)

The reconciliation with the divorced wife, Virginia, is handled with a sort of blunt delicacy. She is an unusually forthright person, who discusses homosexuality and the sexual weariness of the Crouchbacks. Several times she uses a notorious four-letter word, for which Waugh primly substitutes a dash.

He is unfailingly amused by, and feels superior to Americans and their ways. Pronunciation, for example, of "Lootenant" puzzles his characters repeatedly. This top-lofty tone about the rude hoi polloi alternates with the elegant irony Waugh reserves for his effete gentry.

The novel ends not with a bang but a simper. Crouchback's wife having been killed in an air raid (after first turning Catholic), he remarries, settles down in the country, and fathers a couple of children to ensure the continuance of the Crouchback line. The high resolve of the first book and the stern courage of the second descend to the flat conventionality of the third. Waugh records it all with equal mastery. J. B.

Lord Russell Writes in a Dark Moment:

THE CHOICE? BE RED or DEAD

In the last chapter of his new book Bertrand Russell asserts, somewhat melodramatically: "I am writing at a dark moment (July, 1961), and it is impossible to know whether the human race will last long enough for what I write to be published, or, if published, to be read."

Today those words sound pretty silly. This is a harsh word to use about so eminent a thinker and so earnest an idealist as Lord Russell. However, it is no secret by now that his lordship's admirable qualities are not always backed by practical judgment, particularly in public affairs.

This little book is his plea for total disarmament before we destroy the human race in a nuclear war. It is, so to speak, a handbook for the well-meaning groups who parade at mass meetings and sit down at air stations in Britain. Their protests are theoretically directed against all nuclear power.

Much of this book is a restatement of facts and principles on which there is general agreement. Nuclear war, says Lord Russell, is a dreadful thing and should be abolished forever. Agreed. To bring this about, there should be total disarmament among the nuclear powers with destruction of all their bombs. Agreed again. The problem lies in the manner of achieving these ideals.

The stumbling block hitherto has been the Soviet Union, with its messianic concept of world denomination. It is one of the supreme ironies of history that at the very time the traditionally dominant powers are ending their colonial cycle, the Soviet Union, which has never before played a world role, should be entering its own colonial cycle. It is this difference in timing which bedevils all attempts to reconcile the policies of East and West.

Lord Russell's answer to this problem is to say flatly that it is better to be Red than dead, and leave it to later generations to achieve a solution. Logically, he may be right, but the choice before us today is not that simple. It is the policy of the West to sway the East from its extremism, and sooner or later the West may succeed. When that happens — and time has wrought many changes in Russia — it will be possible to avoid being either Red or dead. T.S.

ST. JOSEPH'S BUILT TO SERVE NO CREED

Now that Greater Victoria is preparing to turn another first sod and lay another first cornerstone for St. Joseph's Hospital, I went digging back into history to learn all I could about the turning of the very first sod and the laying of the very first cornerstone for what has become one of this area's most indispensable institutions.

We're all happier if we can stay out of them, but if we must, it's good to know that Victoria has two excellent hospitals—Royal Jubilee and St. Joseph's. All through the years they have suffered growing pains, natural enough in an area that is always growing in population.

The Sisters of St. Ann had been here but 16 years when their good friends, Sir James Douglas, by then retired, and his son-in-law, Dr. John Sebastian Helmcken told them they should have their own hospital. From 1858 the nuns had been caring for ill people in their small convent, and in the patients' homes. Now the time had come for a hospital. Old Sir James and Dr. Helmcken conferred with their friend Bishop Charles Seghers, and so the decision was made.

Victorians were advised in a note in The Colonist of Nov. 10, 1874 —"A NOBEL OBJECT — Messrs. P. McTiernan, T. J. Burnes, William Tierney, H. Thibert and F. McGuill have been requested by Bishop Seghers to solicit subscriptions for the erection of a hospital to be called St. Joseph's and which will be entrusted to the Sisters of St. Ann."

There were some citizens against the Sisters' hospital, and so there was a letter-to-the-editor, saying that some people say 'this institution will be sectarian of creed . . . Well, call it sectarian if you like—apply that unkind word, hardly worthy of a gentleman, to the self-sacrificing beneficence of the Sisters. Let Victoria show her charity, let a Sisters' hospital be built, let it receive the patronage of the government, the support of the people, the approbation of all classes, and it will be the pride and glory of British Columbia."

James Syme was hired as architect, and the contract was awarded to Messrs. Hayward and Jenkinson: "The style of architecture will be Tuscan, and the appearance of the whole will be plain, neat and substantial."

By late August of 1875 St. Joseph's was ready for its first ceremony. The Colonist said: "A number of citizens assembled on Collinson Street to witness the interesting event of laying the first stone of St. Joseph's Hospital by Hon. Dr. J. S. Helmcken. The medical profession was well represented, Drs. Ash, Jackson and Barnard being present, besides the doctor of the day."

The first St. Joseph's was where the main Collinson Street entrance is today. Where the Humboldt Street entrance now is was Victoria's first Roman Catholic cathedral, now the chapel of St. Ann's Academy. Bishop Seghers, that day 88 years ago, told what would be the mission of St. Joseph's and the Sisters: "Irrespective of creed or nationality, St. Joseph's Hospital will open its doors to such of our people afflicted with sickness; it will afford relief and comfort to persons of every condition and standing in society; it will give shelter within its walls to the poor, the needy, the friendless and the houseless."

It was a happy day in Dr. Helmcken's life, for he saw one of his dreams for the betterment of Victoria coming t r u e. Bishop Seghers, turning to him, Victoria's well-beloved "old doctor," said: In selecting you, honorable sir, to lay the cornerstone of this charitable institution, our object is to honor, in you, the friend of the poor, and the humane reliever of human suffering and misery in its multiplied forms.

"More than mere allusion to your well-known charity would doubtless offend your modesty, but a due appreciation of it is stored up in the minds and hearts of many, and on me devolves the welcome honor of giving to that silent appreciation a public expression, and to your unremitting benevolence, a grateful and well-deserved acknowledgement."

And the doctor received a great cheer, when he rose to say that "as he looked at the church, the convent, and the hospital he could not but feel that they were institutions for the cure and education of humanity from the cradle to the grave.

"You have a very rare tropical disease, Mr. Lundy — so we've decided to call in a specialist."

"He thought it a great point in favor of this particular institution that it would be under the care of the Sisters of St. Ann, as that would guarantee good nursing, which was of more importance than medicine, and it would be valuable if only as a school for nurses."

By April of 1876 the Sisters held their first "open house" at St. Joseph's: "On the ground floor the day ward was converted into a lunch room, where Mrs. Boscowitz, Mrs. Kent and Mrs. Heywood dispensed the 'substantials' with generous hands.

"On the upper floor was the bazaar. The tables were covered with ornamental and useful articles, some of them of great beauty. The musical portion of the entertainment was conducted by Mr. Charles Lombard (whose daughter, Sister Mary Patricia, is a member of St. Ann's today), with great success. Choruses were sung by St. Andrew's Cathedral choir, and instrumental selections were played by the Mechanics' Institute Orchestra. Amongst those who took part in the vocalism were Mme. Beckingham, Miss Helmcken, Miss Kelly, Mr. Lombard and Mr. Lucas."

St. Joseph's now bears no resemblance to the first wing Dr. Helmcken opened so long ago. Many new wings have been added through the years, and now the time has come to build another one, in this, the centennial year of civic administration in Victoria.
